Doctors seek 40% raise

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia doctors want more money — about 40 per cent more — and they also want a 37½-hour, five-day week.

The doctors, who start fee negotiations with the provincial government this fall, discussed their position Saturday at the B.C. Medical Association's annual convention.

The association wants an across-the-board fee increase to bring doctors' incomes into line with other wage earners, said committee chairman Dr. Bud Lott.

No figures have been officially announced, but the Vancouver Sun quotes sources in the association as indicating the increase would be around 40 per cent.

Negotiators want to increase general practitioners' salaries to 80 per cent of specialists', from the current 73 per cent, he said, and they also want equalization of specialists' incomes.

And they want a 37½-hour, five-day work week.

If bargaining fails, negotiators say they will ask B.C.'s 4,600 doctors to balance bill — charge patients the difference between payments doctors receive through medicare and the amount the association is asking.

A new schedule of fees will be compiled by the association for the fall, to be used as the basis for balance billing if negotiations fail.

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke told the doctors Saturday a miserly B.C. government spends a quarter of a billion dollars a year less than it should on health programs.

Cocke (New Westminster) said the government has been diverting federal funds intended for health care into other areas since 1977 when Ottawa introduced a new cost-sharing scheme to give the provinces more flexibility in health-care spending.

He said B.C. should have a health care system consistent with its economic health.

Cocke was addressing the convention in place of Health Minister Rafe Mair who refused to attend because of statements by association president Dr. Mel Petreman.

Petreman said doctors would face an unsympathetic provincial government in their attempt to win higher incomes in this fall's fee schedule negotiations.

Workmen were busy today assembling controversial dish antenna

'Illegal' antenna to tap sky TV going up on legislature lawn

Science and Communications Minister Pat McGeer's slightly illegal experiment in satellite television is under way.

The minister has no federal licence to erect a dish antenna on the back lawn of the legislature but it was being set up today nonetheless.

Starting Tuesday, television programming from satellites will be available on about 10 TV sets in the Legislative Buildings.

A ministry spokesman said the big dish and a smaller companion dish will be in operation for about a month.

Total cost of the experiment is estimated at $6,500, covering equipment rental, setting it up and taking it down again.

McGeer says the experiment is designed to demonstrate the wide variety of TV programming — educational and entertainment — that is available via satellite.

"The law is an ass," he says, when it comes to regulating what may or may not be received on a TV antenna.

If McGeer was hoping for extra publicity from federal officials trying to shut down the illegal operation, he is likely due for a disappointment.

Federal Communications Minister Francis Fox has softened last week's threat of a crackdown on satellite dish receivers.

He now intends to concentrate only on commercial users who resell the programming to community cable systems in remote areas.

Fox says private television viewers shouldn't need a government licence or permission to tune in TV broadcasts directly from a space satellite.

The federal department of communications has insisted for years that any kind of reception from satellites is criminal unless licensed by it.

But Fox said in an interview in Vancouver that when an individual uses his own antenna to bring in broadcasts for his own entertainment, "you come back to first principles — to the kind of country you're living in."

Fox said the government has no more business trying to control people bringing in U.S. "superstations" beamed via satellite from Atlanta or New York than it has trying to control people using conventional antennae to bring in TV from Buffalo.

He took pains to add that many other kinds of reception from satellites do have to be regulated. For example:

— A cable company that picks up TV signals with the intention of selling them to subscribers needs a licence to do it.

— U.S. satellite channels carrying pay-TV services made up of new movies can't legally be tuned in by anyone who doesn't pay, because of copyright laws.

— It is against the law to tune into satellite channels carrying long-distance telephone calls or other private communications.

Fox said Friday in the Commons that there may be a crackdown coming on stations that pick up satellite broadcasts and compete against cable companies. But in remote areas, he said, leniency should be the policy.

Forest fire brings dog breakfast?

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Have you heard the one about the dog, cat, rabbit and chicken?

No? Just ask Constable Terry Graham of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment here.

Graham was one of the officers assigned to handle the 75 calls the detachment received from anxious pet owners evacuated from this community because of an encroaching forest fire.

"I've got a dog, cat, rabbit and chicken locked up in my basement," a dismayed owner telephoned.

"I'm afraid the dog will get hungry and eat the others."

Graham went to the house and discovered the German shepherd and the hen, which was nervously clucking around the living room after laying an egg on the carpet.

There was no sign of the rabbit and the cat, he said.

'I don't know (if the pets were eaten). They just weren't there."

Pension change protest growing

A province-wide campaign against reductions in pension benefits to government workers escalated today with a union announcement some government offices and liquor stores will be closed by rotating walkouts this month.

"We have asked all our members to attend the three protest meetings and we expect this will result in some closures," a spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union said.

The rallies, as announced earlier, are Friday, June 6, in Nanaimo and Courtenay; Tuesday, June 10 in Vancouver and Monday, June 16, in Victoria.

"Some liquor stores will be closed in Victoria on June 16," the spokesman said.

"We held similar rallies on Friday in Cranbrook and Nelson and we got 450 people out to each one. Some liquor stores were closed in each city. This will be the pattern across the province."

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union has already announced it will shut down the ferry service for at least four hours in mid-day so its members can attend the rallies.

The B.C. Teachers Federation said today it will send BCTF officers to the rallies but there will be no walkout by teachers. A representative assembly of 141 teachers on the weekend voted against a one-day walkout.

Ferry service will be disrupted, from mid-morning to mid-afternoon, on the following days:

On June 6 there will be no service during those hours out of Nanaimo.

On June 10 all mid-day service out of Vancouver from Horseshoe Bay and Tsawwassen will be halted.

On June 16 ferries will stop running out of Swartz Bay until the Victoria rally is over.

NDP transportation critic Don Lockstead today blamed the provincial government for the escalating problem.

He said the government has paid no attention to protests lodged by opposition MLAs and therefore workers had to take strong measures to get action.

He predicted teachers would join the walkouts.

Lockstead told the Times:

"I can see the teachers, perhaps, having a one-day

Woodward's food store picketed

By MIKE HUGHES

Employees in the food department at Woodward's Mayfair mall store went on strike today in a fight for their first collective agreement.

Members of the Retail Clerks Union, Local 1518, set up picket lines at 7:30 a.m. at all entrances to the store but both the food store and the company's department store opened as usual at 9:30 a.m.

Personnel from the company's Lower Mainland stores have been brought in to help run the food store.

Members of the meatcutters union refused to cross the picket line today but a company spokesman said the meat department was being run with supervisory help.

The union also put up a secondary picket line at the company's Port Alberni store. The store is still open.

The main issue in the dispute is not wages but disagreement over the granting of benefits like an in-store discount, profit-sharing and pensions that are available to other Woodward's employees including the meatcutters.

Union secretary-treasurer Bryan Denton of Vancouver said Woodward's has decided to take on the union here as a test case.

"The company wants to punish the employees for joining the union and to send a message to other Woodward's employees as to what will happen if they should consider joining the union," he said.

The union is only certified to represent one other group of Woodward's employees, about 35 at the company's furniture warehouse in Vancouver.

Denton said seniority for part-time employees and union security are other issues involved.

He said the company wants a Rand formula system whereby if some employees didn't want to join the union they could just pay the dues. The union wants a union shop with all employees having to join the union after a certain period of employment.

Denton said he doesn't think the union will be able to shut down the company's food outlet here but the store will likely soon run out of a number of products because truck drivers are refusing to cross the picket line.

Bill Brown, vice-president of Woodward's personnel department, said the company will keep the store open "come strike or whatever."

He said the issue in the dispute is that the union wants the food department employees to receive all the benefits that the union has gained for employees in the major supermarkets plus the benefits that other Woodward's employees enjoy.

The company has agreed to give the food store employees the same benefits available to their counterparts in other supermarkets, he said.

Brown said floor stockers make $408 a week and cashiers, $378 a week. However, if there was no labor dispute the rate would have gone to $445 and $416 respectively on April 1, he said.

The exact number of employees involved is disputed. The union says roughly 145, the company says 160.

The union says when the employees were organized in May, 1979, more than 100 signed up. The company says the union barely got a majority.

The union admits that some of the employees in the bargaining unit reported for work today.

Negotiations for a first contract began in October, 1979.

Vote averts postal strike

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be no postal strike.

Postal workers ratified by 89.8 per cent the terms of an agreement worked out with the federal government, the first in 15 years settled without at least a wildcat strike.

It contains a 66-cent-an-hour raise and cost-of-living allowance of 79 cents an hour or eight per cent for postal clerks and 9.3-per-cent for mail handlers.

Volcanic ash circles globe

SILVER SPRINGS, Md. (AP) — The ash from the eruption of the Mount St. Helens volcano has travelled around the world and is back over North America, meteorologists said today.

"The ash is over the Aleutian Islands in Alaska, possibly up to the North Pole and then extending south through Canada," said Roland Draxler, a meteorologist with the Air Resources Laboratory of the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"The ash is in the upper troposphere — about 20,000 to 40,000 feet (6,100 to 12,200 metres) up. It's probably in very low levels and you couldn't see it. However, it may be measurable with scientific instruments."

Meanwhile, scientists said Sunday molten rock inside Mount St. Helens is heating spots on the summit into a red glow, but they were wrong in reporting the formation of a "lava dome" in the crater.

"No topographical change has emerged on the crater floor, so it appears lava has not erupted to the surface as flows or a volcanic dome," a spokesman said.

The mountain spent its first quiet Sunday in three weeks. Steam emissions rose from 3,050 to 4,755 metres in the air but was mixed with little ash.

The big question is, what will it do next.

Patronage charge in energy post

The woman appointed by Energy Minister Bob McClelland to the $60,000-a-year job of chairing the B.C. Energy Commission is the daughter of former Social Credit MLA Bert Price.

"It's incredible," said NDP Leader Dave Barrett when he learned that Marie Taylor is Price's daughter.

"With full respect to Mrs. Taylor as a person, I am amazed that Mr. McClelland would make such an appointment.

"When McClelland was in opposition he would have screamed from the top of Grouse Mountain if he heard we were considering appointing the son or daughter of a former MLA to such a post."

Barrett said Mrs. Taylor, a department store training and management development manager, has no background in the energy field but "obviously she has a political connection."

McClelland called Barrett's allegation of political patronage "a stupid response."

"Obviously, you wouldn't expect us to appoint Barrett's campaign manager. God, anybody with any sense in his head would know we're not going to appoint anyone who's in basic disagreement with the government."

Taylor, contacted at her home in Burnaby, said she would be surprised if her appointment created controversy.

Taylor said she finds it unusual that anyone would question this appointment when no one came forward to mention her father when she was handed other high profile duties such as chairing the Vancouver General Hospital Board during its recent unrest and her appointment six weeks ago to the B.C. Public Services Commission, the body responsible for, among other things, hiring and promoting civil servants.

Taylor, David Newlands and Bob Smith were appointed to the energy commission Friday to replace chairman Norm Gish, deputy chairman John Ludgate and James David King. Gish resigned to return to private industry while King left to devote more time to his work for the B.C. harbors board.

Ludgate, however, denied he was leaving to return to the private sector as indicated in a press release Friday from McClelland's office.

"I'm 50 years old and unemployed," he said Saturday.

U.S. prime cut to 13½%

Times News Services

UMB Bank and Trust Co. of New York, one of the city's smaller lenders, today lowered its prime lending rate a half point to 13½ per cent, a reduction some analysts expect major banks to match this week.

Supporting the analysts' predictions is the extremely weak demand for bank business loans. On Friday the Federal Reserve reported commercial and industrial loans at the nation's biggest banks fell for the seventh consecutive week, bringing the decline over the period to $5.9 billion.

Some banks reportedly are offering valued customers short-term rates well under their posted prime in order to obtain loan business. The official prime rate at most major banks currently is 14 per cent, a level adopted last week.

Meanwhile, in Jasper, Dr. Morton Shulman said Canada will face wage and price controls and 20- to 25-per-cent inflation by next year.

Shulman, author of How to Profit From Inflation, told the weekend annual convention of the Alberta Law Society that inflation is not going to stop.

He said the rate can go as high as 300 per cent before the system breaks down. "We've got 10 years," he added.

The government can be expected to impose wage and price controls within a year, Shulman said, although such controls offer only a short-term solution.

"Imposing wage and price controls is like putting a cork in the spout of a kettle to stop the steam escaping. It works — for a while.

Rent controls are due for a comeback within five years because of "tremendous political pressures," Shulman said.

"There are 1,000 voters renting apartments for every one who owns an apartment building."

Ontario forest fire refugees return home

KENORA (CP) — As lines were completed during the weekend around forest fires that a week ago were threatening several northwestern Ontario communities, most of the 4,000 fire refugees returned home to resume normal lives.

Cool, wet weather helped firefighters circle the once-menacing fires, said a spokesman at the province's fire-management centre in Sault Ste. Marie.

Most of the 3,650 residents of the Red Lake area, 110 kilometres northeast of Kenora, were flown home from Winnipeg where they had been taken May 23.

About 600 Indians evacuated from Fort Hope, 375 kilometres northeast of Thunder Bay, were also flown back Sunday from Geraldton and Nakina where they had been taken May 22 when a forest fire threatened their community.

The Kenora 23 forest fire east of this community near the Manitoba border was still dangerous enough to prevent the return of the 450 residents of the Grassy Narrows Indian reserve, 60 kilometres northeast of Kenora.

The fire-management spokesman said mopping up of the larger fires will likely begin late this week.

Cooler temperatures and some rain have also improved the fire situation in Manitoba.

Pro-Arab pair hurt

TEL AVIV (AP) — Two West Bank mayors who champion the Palestinian cause were maimed today when their booby-trapped cars blew up and seven Arabs were wounded in a hand grenade attack on the crowded main square of Hebron, Israel's army radio reported.

Bassam Shakaa, mayor of Nablus, had both legs amputated and Kerim Khalaf, mayor of Ramallah, lost part of his left foot, a spokesman at the Ramallah hospital said. The two were taken to hospitals after their cars exploded when they tried to start them. Military spokesman had no information on the identity of the attackers.

Coast Guard triple prize

A Victoria man took the top three awards at the Canadian Coast Guard College graduation ceremonies in Sidney, N.S. on the weekend.

Marine engineer Wake Collins, 22, son of Mrs. Pamela McAlpine, 1060 Linden, received the Maritime Regional Trophy for top engineering officer cadet and the Graves' Prize for top third-year cadet in academics.

He also received the Conway Medal for finest officer-type qualities. The gold medal, which is donated by Queen Elizabeth, was presented to Collins by Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

The medal recipient is chosen by votes among the faculty, as well as second and third-year officer cadets.

The BCTF passed a resolution urging its members to attend protest rallies wherever posible but later it passed another resolution opposing a one-day walkout. Some exeuctive members of the BCTF are expected to attend the rallies.

"We don't like to see any of our transportation system shut down at any time," Lockstead said. But he felt it was the only way public service workers could get the government to sit up and take notice.

"Nothing seems to impress them otherwise. We can raise these issues in the legislature and we do. They don't listen. They make funny remarks. They're just not paying attention."

Transporation Minister Alex Fraser was not available for comment on the threatened shutdowns.

Stranded Ucluelet man safe

A Ucluelet man is safe after being stranded overnight on Saturday on an island outside the harbor there.

David Schuetze, 25 left Ucluelet about noon Saturday in a 10-foot rowboat.

When the weather worsened and the seas roughened, Schuetze scrambled ashore on the island.

A spokesman for the RCMP detachment at Ucluelet said Schuetze returned home about 8:30 a.m. on Sunday.

WHY IS THE SHOCKS AND BRAKES SPECIAL GOOD VALUE?

If your shocks are damaged, the "roll" of your tires is thrown out of line. The end result is uneven and faster tire wear. And we know how expensive that can be.

Poor shocks can also increase your gas consumption, because of irregular and unnecessary body sway.

Brakes, too, will contribute to uneven tire wear, if they are worn or improperly adjusted. All wheels must brake at the same time to maintain even tire wear.

These are just a few examples of why we say the Shocks and Brakes Special is a good investment in assuring a proper life for your tires. See your participating Texaco retailer displaying the above pole sign, and ask for full details. Prices apply to most passenger cars.

Fillings deadly — for dentists?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mercury poisoning threatens dentists, dental assistants and even persons sharing a building with a dental office.

But patients appear to be exempt from the threat.

The poisoning comes from the mercury amalgam, the copper-silver-mercury mixture used to fill teeth, but "you're more likely to die from not having dental work done than from mercury poisoning from fillings," Dr. Richard Roydhouse, a city dentist and researcher, said Sunday in an interview.

He recomends that women in dental jobs avoid pregnacy because a fetus is at least four times more sensitive to mercury poisoning than an adult.

"In the atmosphere existing in dental offices, there is no margin of safety for a fetus," he said.

Levels of mercury previously thought safe in fact cause symptoms of chronic, low-level mercury poisoning, said Roydhouse, a professor of restorative dentistry at the University of B.C.

In addition, measurements of mercury levels often are inaccurate.

He said research is needed into potential danger of high mercury levels spreading from dental offices to other offices through heating and sewage systems and on clothing.

Earlier studies, said Roydhouse, incorrectly assumed mercury vapor in dentists' offices was from spillage of mercury used in dental amalgams which were thought stable.

The amalgam particles "emit mercury as if they were 50 per cent mercury, as indeed they are."

Amalgam debris falls on carpets, collects in drawers and floats in the air while a dentist drills away at an old filling. The mercury clings to carpeting, shoes and vacuum bags, making it easy to spread.

This adds up to gradual poisoning from methyl mercury, said Roydhouse, accumulating in areas of the brain responsible for movement of limbs, thought, memory and emotions.

He said he is working on the solution — a filter to clean the mercury from the air.

Shopping Act opposed

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The proposed Holiday Shopping Act creates unfair conditions for business by penalizing some and rewarding others on the basis of municipal boundaries, Len Friesen, of the Community Business and Professional Association, said Sunday.

The association has cabled a protest to Attorney-General Allan Williams.

BCTF meet against Que. separation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two hundred B.C. teachers have rejected a resolution declaring support for Quebec's right to self-determination, including separation from Canada.

A majority of delegates at a representative assembly of the B.C. Teachers' Federation (BCTF) ignored a personal pitch from president Al Blakey who said that English Canadians still don't realize that unity will be maintained only when English and French Canada are equal.

Surrey teachers proposed the resolution after an assembly last fall voted to donate $28,000 to help English-speaking teachers in Quebec fight the province's controversial language legislation.

The grant — $1 for each B.C. teacher — helped Quebec's Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers to educate children of immigrants in English. Under Quebec's language charter, Bill 101, those children are prohibited from receiving their education in English.

At the time, the vice-president of the French teachers' union called the tactic "anti-democratic, anti-union, anti-social and anti-education."

At the weekend conference, the BCTF also called for elimination of hiring discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and preference.

Kamloops teacher Cecil Ashe, who helped draft the motion, said it doesn't mean the federation supports homosexuality. He said teachers may not be discriminated against because of their race, age or sex and should not face discrimination because of their sexual preferences.

Roberts fears wipeout of Fraser environment

VANCOUVER (CP) — The only way to prevent complete destruction of the Fraser River estuary habitat is to prohibit further industrial development, says federal Environment Minister John Roberts.

"We're down to the limit, down to 30 per cent of the total number of hectares that are serving the environment," he said. "If we lose any more of it there won't be any environment left.

Environmental conditions along the Fraser River are so serious, Roberts said Saturday, that the federal and provincial governments might have to take more action to preserve the habitat.

The two governments last week agreed to buy 73.6 hectares (182 acres) of marshland in the estuary.

These geese don't migrate

SURREY (CP) — Canada geese hatched artificially at the bird sanctuary here, no longer migrate north in the spring as is the custom of wild Canada geese. They feed year-round on the 1.6-kilometre-wide delta of farmland between the dikes along the Serpentine and Nicomekl rivers.

Several area dairy farmers blame the geese for crop losses of about $10,000 per farm.

Regional wildlife biologist Tom Burgess said the branch may develop feed, a corn field or pastures, for the geese on the 270-acre sanctuary to encourage them to stay off the farms.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm, MLA for the area, said he will be discussing the sanctuary with Environment Minister Stephen Rogers and with cabinet's land use committee this week.

Police funding needed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Municipalities with their own police forces will have to cut other local services unless the provincial government provides financial aid, says West Vancouver Mayor Derrick Humphreys.

He was one of 12 municipal mayors who met Saturday to discuss the issue.

While Victoria, Vancouver, Nelson, Saanich and others pay the total cost of their police services, say the mayors, smaller towns with RCMP detachments receive financial assistance.

Wolves threatening herds

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An increase in wolf and coyote populations in B.C.'s interior has cattlemen worried there will be a sharp increase this summer in the number of livestock slaughtered by wild animals.

Cattlemen are already reporting wolves and coyotes mixed in with their herds, said Henry Blazowski, secretary manager of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association.

Stuck with each other

If it wasn't counselling a breach of provincial legislation, the only sensible recommendation would be that the Municipality of Saanich opt out of the Capital Regional District.

Not because Saanich is getting a raw deal, but because Saanich is impeding the logical evolution of regional co-operation that would ultimately benefit us all.

The action taken by five of the nine Saanich councillors last Thursday has more than likely permanently impaired the resurrection of goodwill between the CRD and the municipality.

They turned down a proposition that might have led to an out-of-court settlement of the Tillicum shopping centre dispute. Even if the proposal presented by Alderman Howard Sturrock had failed and the court case continued, Saanich would have at least shown good faith and a much needed spirit of co-operation.

Saanich and the CRD are embroiled in a legal battle over the size of the Tillicum shopping centre. Saanich lifted a restrictive couvenant limiting the plaza to 295,000 square feet, allowing the developers to build a 495,000 square foot building. The CRD claims that Saanich did so illegally.

Sturrock's plan, actually a rehash of one presented by Victoria alderman Bob Wright at a CRD meeting the day before, called for Saanich to submit the expanded version of the Tillicum shopping centre to the CRD for a binding decision.

The CRD would pay any legal costs Saanich might face as a result of the CRD's decision. The City of Victoria in future would also be required to submit developments of regional implication to the CRD for final disposition. And most important, the lawyers of the CRD, Saanich and Victoria were to sit down and hash out a way to accomplish all of the above.

In short, Saanich had nothing to lose. If the lawyers couldn't come up with an acceptable plan, then the court cases would continue. But at least an effort at an out-of-court settlement would have been attempted.

At stake was not only the future relationship between the CRD and Saanich, but also the thousands of taxpayers' dollars that are being spent to have these authorities argue the size of Tillicum in court.

In addition, both the CRD, represented by chairman Jim Campbell, and Victoria, represented by Bill McElroy, approached the council on bended knee to ask that it support Sturrock's motion. They pleaded in good faith. Victoria city council was standing in the wings ready to ratify its half of the bargain.

Saanich's counter-offer to the CRD — to present the expanded Tillicum proposal to the CRD for information purposes only — is meaningless.

Now the Mayor of Saanich and the CRD chairman are exchanging derogatory accusations, one more sign that the future of regional planning upon which the future of Greater Victoria relies so heavily is in jeopardy.

Meanwhile, Saanich will continue to sit on the regional board as legally required, and no resolution is in sight to a dispute will can profit only law firms. Some common sense advice, and mediation, from the provincial government is overdue.

Municipal reform

In light of the municipal warfare described in the editorial above, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's new land use and planning act should be welcomed.

From the scant details released so far, it appears that municipal squabbles such as the one between the Capital Regional District and Saanich will have little chance of ending up in a costly court battle.

The new bill provides for a five to seven person municipal appeal board to rule on disputes between municipalities, regional districts and individuals. Had such legislation been in force, Greater Victoria residents probably would have known weeks ago the size of the Tillicum shopping centre.

The bill will also force B.C. Hydro and the highways department to reveal their long-term land use needs. This will ease many of the concerns people have about these agencies.

Municipalities will also have to standardize and then publish a procedure rule book. This will allow citizens to understand how to do business with town council, thus eliminating much of the confusion and frustration that plague so many land holders.

All in all, a much needed piece of legislation.

Corralling the sacred cows

OTTAWA — If Andre Ouellet decides to do anything about the bright red report now sitting on his desk, he'll be charging into a whole pasture full of sacred cows.

The controversial 250-page document, prepared for the federal consumer affairs department, was made public last week. It calls on the government to shatter the long, status-laden tradition allowing professionals such as doctors and lawyers to set their own working rules.

This would put Ouellet on a collision course with such august bodies as the Law Society of Upper Canada — or any other province — the Canadian Bar Association, the Canadian Medical Association, the College of Physicians and Surgeons of any province, the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, the Canadian Veterinary Medical Association and the Canadian Dental Association.

These bodies ban advertising, for example. The report says this denies consumers the right to compare compare prices and services. It also gives big-name practitioners a marked advantage both money-wise and in attracting clients.

Fees set

They also set mimimum fees. The report says this is probably illegal under Canadian competition law. The practice probably also enables professionals to earn more than they would if they had to compete with one another like normal workers.

And they alone can license anyone wishing to practise. The report finds this the most distasteful aspect of self-regulation:

"Occupational licensing has typically brought higher status for the producer of services at the price of higher costs to the consumer; it has reduced competition, it has narrowed opportunity for aspiring youth by increasing the costs of entry into a desired career, it has artificially segmented skills so that needed services such as health care are increasingly difficult to supply economically, it has fostered the cynical view that unethical practices will prevail unless those entrenched in a profession are assured of higher incomes and it has caused a proliferation of official administrative bodies, most of them staffed by persons drawn from and devoted to furthering the interests of the licensed occupations themselves."

The report estimates the total cost of these restrictive practices, for the year 1970, was more than $347 million.

The consumer affairs department has been sitting impatiently on the report for almost six months, waiting for the federal election and the Quebec referendum to end, and various other political obstacles to disappear. It was commissioned in 1977 by then consumer affairs minister Warren Allmand and prepared by two Queen's University professors, Timothy Muzondo and Bohumir Pazderka.

Although Ouellet greeted it with the standard response that he is "looking into the matter," an aide admitted this week it would probably be shuffled out of the limelight as rapidly as possible.

ANDRE OUELLET
. . . sits on report

Not only do the study's recommendations spill over into matters of provincial jurisdiction, they also point out how ineffective federal competition law has been in protecting the interests of the public against the costly actions of high-powered professional groups.

Although the report stops short of accusing professional governing bodies of price-fixing it points out — again for the year 1970 — that they managed to boost the average income of their members by:

— 11.2 per cent through their fee-setting practices.

— 10.3 per cent by restricting entry and mobility among the five professions examined — medicine, veterinary medicine, law, architecture and dentistry.

— 4.2 per cent by protecting them from advertising.

But a new spirit of consumer activism is afoot in the land, say officials of the historically outspoken competition bureau of Ouellet's department.

Depending on the exposure the report gets, it could set off a new flurry of dissatisfaction with Canada's select group of mystery shrouded professionals.

Changes abroad

At the moment, the bureau is looking into four formal complaints against professional associations. One accuses several B.C. dentists of price-fixing, a second charges that the Ontario Veterinary Association is guilty of conspiracy to reduce competition (the body put several community-sponsored pet neutering clinics out of business) and two were filed by rebellious B.C. lawyers who are determined to break through their provincial association's advertising prohibition.

The consumer affairs department normally gets between 12 and 20 such complaints a year and is required by law to look into each one.

Canada, says the report, appears to allow its professional associations more latitude than any other western country.

"No other jurisdiction delegates its power to the professions so easily as do most Canadian provinces."

The economic stranglehold of professional bodies is already being broken abroad. Medical records in the United States have become riddled with malpractice suits in recent years. Members of fringe professional groups, such as pharmacists and optometrists have moved away from their non-advertising codes.

In Canada, questions are only beginning to surface:

— Do doctors charge too much?

— Should lawyers be able to advertise storefront divorces?

— Mightn't it help lower dental bills if it was easier for the patient to find out if his dentist's charges were in line with everybody else's?

So far these issues have been confined largely to back-yard complaining and academic studies. Ouellet now has the opportunity to get the government into the act. He's thinking about it.

Wrong site

I feel very strongly that although the building of the Reid site convention centre may be good for Victoria and the tourist trade, the Wharf Street waterfront is not the best place for it to be situated.

I, like Mr. Bawlf, am also thinking of the tourist trade, and believe that it is necessary and inevitable that Victoria expands and develops with the times. In some ways this is regrettable and it must be done responsibly and with extreme care. Our city and its waterfront are precious.

I do not see that the problem is being considered with extreme care, but rather it seems to be satisfying the needs of a group of already-wealthy businssmen instead of the public or the tourist trade.

The view across the waters of the harbor to Wharf Street and to the city beyond is astonishingly ageless and remarkable in the fact that in this year of 1980 there appears not to be a highrise in sight. The low, attractive "higgledy, piddledy" skyline rises to a vast high blue sky that at present is still so characteristic of Victoria.

To date, Victoria is still a city with a strong character of its own, which, I am told, is a source of delight to our American tourists. As the ferry enters the harbor the openess of the Wharf Street waterfront with the city skyline behind it greets the visitor. Victoria's history is immediately open to view, from the Parliament Buildings to the Johnson Street Bridge — Victoria's heritage.

Just as the Reid Centres and highrises have their place in a city, so do history, tradition and an appreciation of the past. These attributes are as important to our own psychological growth as is the economic growth of our city to its future.

I enjoy, as I am sure all Victorians and visitors do, looking across the emptiness of Wharf Street, from the city to the sparkling harbor and the Sooke Hills beyond, and deplore the thought of a great concrete mass, even if it is only one or two stories high, blocking the view. I would get used to it I'm sure, but I would be the poorer for it. Waterfront should be free for us all to wander on and enjoy.

If the Reid Centre is built on our precious waterfront, then anything can happen. If the Reid Centre is to be such a great asset to our city then it hardly matters where it is situated. Wharf Street waterfront is already a great asset to the city, but build on it and it is destroyed forever, as is its harmony with the rest of Victoria.

To Mr. Bawlf I would like to say "Please, as you have done in the past, let your heart continue to influence your business head, a little, because the two work together reasonably well for Victoria (I think);" and to Mayor Tindall I would like to say that I fear that our attitudes towards the development and exploitation of Victoria will greatly harm our city. I believe it is a great pity that you cannot combine a strong business-sense with a sensitivity towards culture and heritage as did former mayors Pollen and Young. — T. E. Malin, 367 Irving Road.

Eternal deficits

In reaction to the inquiries pertaining to my position in regard to Victoria's proposed convention centre, I would like to reconfirm that my appearance at council supporting this concept hasn't changed from the original stand which recommends its erection, but opposes taxpayers' subsidization for its construction and future deficits. The application of a one per cent increase in business tax I personally patronized at the last tourism symposium in order to generate extra funds to further promote our local travel industry, certainly not to offset convention subsidies. City elected officials must not tolerate the jeopardy of these principles.

The study I have made of the actual plans reflect that on its own, the convention centre will encounter eternal deficits. Therefore, to make this venture feasible, I have submitted the incorporation of a hotel housing the trade conference centre which would provide facilities year round and proper accommodation to delegates.

Governments' status in this case should be to benefit the entire community rather than a few to the detriment of taxpayers. — Antonio Sanchez, 2 Centennial Square.

Blame opposition

It is the cherished prerogative of every citizen of a free country to express his or her views on some aspects of government. In most cases, I do believe, comments are genuine, honest and sincere.

The fact that a person may not approve of some particular legislation, doesn't, however, imply a total or even a partial rejection of the government: the criticism is meant in a kindly way and hopefully effective — to point out some problems which exist, and need consideration.

This normally should be one of the major duties of an enlightened, helpful and responsible opposition. Unhappily, it doesn't appear to be the case in our provincial legislature, because the sole purpose of the opposition seems to be to bring down the government by piling up accusations, day in and day out, and seldom, if ever, offering any valuable solution to any problem.

If the government well deserves some adverse criticism, so does the opposition, because of its total lack of co-operation and willingness to be constructive instead of negative.

What is more important for the opposition, to alienate the people and create a climate of mistrust in the government, or work for the good of the citizens of this province?

No need for the opposition to answer this question: we know the answer, and, without bias or prejudice, we cannot be happy about it. — E. I. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Electric heat

The price of the extra electricity used for electric heat has been increased by 172 per cent since 1973 when I had it installed in my house with the encouragement of B.C. Hydro; over the same time period the price of electricity for normal use (electric lights and appliances) has been increased by only 50 per cent. The 172 per cent increase is unfair and unjustified.

These practices go against the nation's policy of conservation of non-renewable energy resources which encourages the use of solar power of which water-generated electricity is the most important form. Not only is Hydro electricity a renewable energy, but it is in surplus supply, more of which is to be exported to the USA. Electric heat is also very clean, producing no air pollution whatsoever.

Nevertheless, should B.C. Hydro still want to discourage the use of electricity for heat by a disproportionately large increase in price, then at least those homes equipped with electric heat before an announced date should be exempted from this increase. That date should not be set until natural gas is piped in as a reasonable alternative which will not be for a very long time in Victoria.

The technical reason why electricity for heat is inherently cheap to supply and should be priced low is that it makes the most economical use of the generation and distribution facilities because its power load is steady. It is steady not only because heat is required throughout the day in cold weather, but because the electricity used in other appliances such as stoves, lights, hot water, also help heat the house whereupon the thermostats shut off the electric heaters in proportion. By comparison, non-electrically heated homes make very irregular demands on the electricity supply.

Electric heat would be even more economical if the heaters were to be shut off completely during peak load periods and I suggest that homes that do that should pay 1.2 cents per KWH which is one-quarter of the peak rate. Initially this program could be started immediately by requiring the occupants themselves to shut off all of their thermostats during hours specified by B.C. Hydro, but eventually it would be more convenient and reliable to have electronic switches installed at the mains that would be activated by B.C. Hydro. should encorage the installation of electric heating systems which store heat such as hot water radiators or, better still, heated floors. — E. Harvey Richardson, 1871 Elmhurst Place.

Enjoyable giving

The Pro Patria Branch No. 31, of the Royal Canadian Legion, recently held a Las Vegas Family Variety Show at the Royal Theatre to raise funds for several causes. The monies were distributed in the following amounts:

Open Heart Society, $2,500; Dr. Brownlee's Cardiac Development, $4,300; Chair of Family Practice, $500; Pacific Command Bursary, $300; Canadian Legion Housing, $1,200; Sir Percy Lake Scholarship, $200; Pro Patria Benevolent Fund, $400.

The public who saw the show, and those who donated towards it, were responsible for its success and should know how the proceeds were used. The people who attended, reported it was first class family entertainment. A rewarding and enjoyable way of giving.

On behalf of the Members and Executive of Pro Patria Branch No. 31 we thank the citizens of Victoria and district for their support. — Jim S. Scullion, Show Chairman, Pro Patria Branch No. 31, Royal Canadian Legion.

Victoria Landmarks

Modern photographic equipment differs greatly from the many glass plates, strong tripod, chemicals, distilled water and dark room tent lugged about British Columbia by our early photographers.

One such photographer was Frederick Dally, an Englishman who emigrated in 1862. In 1867, he visited the Cariboo with Colonial Governor Seymour's party. By 1868 he had a photographic studio in Bakerville.

Some of his surviving Cariboo scenes depict goldminers at work, portions of the Cariboo Road, Bakerville just before and after the fire that destroyed it on a September, 1868, afternoon.

Although trained as a portrait photographer and, after his Bakerville period, establishing an advertised Photographic Gallery on the south side of Fort Street, Dally's Victoria scenes were his main contribution to our local historical record.

They include views of downtown streets and buildings with their commercial signs.

Dally was in Victoria less than a decade. Photographers Hannah and Richard Maynard were here much longer.

Open on June 2 and on weekdays through the summer, the Provincial Archives' free exhibit in the Archives building is "Mr. and Mrs. R. Maynard — Photographic Artistes."

The Maynards and Dally tell us much about our city and British Columbia in the nineteenth century.

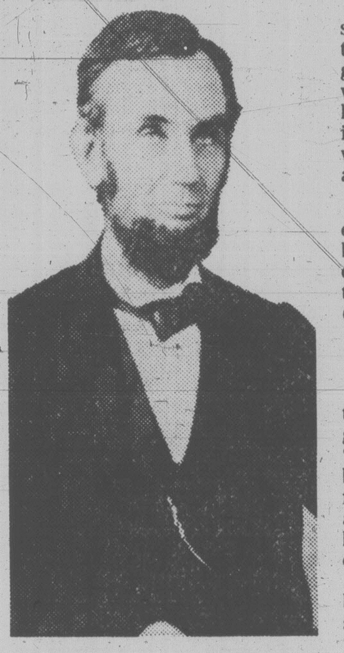
Quoting Lincoln

We have here the first confession from a deliberate quotation cooker.

Avid readers will recall the criticism in this space of a campaign television commercial for President Carter that misquoted a Lincoln phrase, "The last best hope of earth." The poetic "of" was changed on television to "on."

Comes now Harry Miles Muheim, of Silver Spring, Md., who writes on his home stationery but who can be tracked down to the Pennsylvania offices of Rafshoon Associates, producers of the Carter TV commercials.

"I changed Lincoln's preposition for three reasons," he writes, all Gaul. "First, I didn't think anybody would notice." (He reckoned without eagle-eared Richard Hanser of Mamaroneck, N.Y., the same phrase detective who hounded the Library of Congress into tracing "founding fathers" to coinage by Warren G. Harding.)



LINCOLN . . . fiddled hope

"Second, I was anxious to keep the viewer's focus on the idea rather than the poetry. Lincoln's line was poetic. Mine was not. Mine said simply this: 'Over a hundred years ago, Abraham Lincoln said that this nation was the last best hope on earth.' In this pedestrian, low-flown observation, the use of the accurate preposition, 'of,' would have caused the TV viewer, who lives in a nonpoetic, high-speed world, to turn to his or her companion and say to him or her:

" 'How come Lincoln didn't say, "On earth," instead of "of earth"? Was he just trying to be classy?'

"As soon as the companion replied, the effectiveness of the spot would have been destroyed. For the remainder of the 30 seconds, they would not be considering whether President Carter was a peacemaker, but whether President Lincoln was pretentious. Jerry Rafshoon, an experienced man in focusing political spots, would have sensed immediately that this was off the mark."

The truthful, if unrepentant, Muheim concludes: "Third, I did not change the meaning of Lincoln's idea — not by a scintilla, a jot, a hair, a smidgen, or even a tittle. And the preservation of underlying ideas is, as your column illustrates in such microscopic detail each week, an important part of writing right."

As Lincoln used to say, "with malice toward hardly any," let us turn to "jot and tittle."

To a tee

"Whence 'to a tee'?" I wondered in passing, and Harrison C. Coffin of Schenectady, N.Y., snappishly advises, "The correct expression is 'to a T,' not 'to a tee.' It means 'precisely' . . . as though measured by a T square. Try to get access to a good dictionary." Man sounds teed off. He's right about derivation, halfway right about spelling — "to a tee" is preferred.

Another reader, Marie Borroff of the English Department at Yale, thinks the expression might have been influenced by "to cross your t's," and, while she's at it, adds: "Have they also told you that the phrase 'the last jot and tittle' is of similar provenance? A 'jot' (from iota) is the small letter 'i,' and the 'tittle' is the dot over it. I used to think the jot was the dot and the tittle was the cross stroke of the 't.' "

Spokesmanspeak

"Positive" is a word that used to mean "sure." Am I sure? I'm positive.

In spokesmanspeak, however, "positive" now means "affirmative, constructive, encouraging." The old meaning of "definite" — its root meaning a specific place or position — lingers on, but in vogue usage the word no longer denotes a person's certainty. It is now the encouragement or forwardness of a development or a step.

The most meagre concession is hailed as a "positive step," perhaps taken from mathematics, where the word means "greater than zero." But the opposite is not what might be expected: there are no "negative steps" yet. Rather, the trendy opposite of "positive" is "not helpful."

Do not be irked by this year's spokesmanspeak cliche. "Positive" — in its sense of "That's good, but nothing to get delirious with joy about" — is better than last year's hot word, "forthcoming," which confused "forthright" with "soon to come" with an added twist of "helpful."

What will next year's favorite expression of cautious optimism be? Though this may be considered unhelpful, it won't be "positive" — of that you can be sure (but he didn't say, "Positively").

Fungo

"Origin unknown," say the dictionaries. Does anybody have a good theory about how the word "fungo" came to be? The word is baseball lingo for a lazy fly ball hit for fielding practice, and some aging outfielders think it may have had to do with the type of wood used in fungo bats. In High and Inside, a new guide to baseball slang, Joseph McBride speculates that it may come from "one go, two goes, fun goes."

Hit the answer my way, at The New York Times, 1000 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D.C. 20036. Hope you guys do better on this than on "bargaining chip," which remains a metaphoric mystery.

Nature boy

Watch out for a newly popular way of stringing out adjectives. Whenever you hear, "The moves were nonbelligerent in nature," or, "My attempt was peaceful in character," ask yourself: Why "in nature"? Why "in character"?

The speaker may be trying to say "essentially," which is itself a tricky adverb often used to insinuate "no matter what else it seems to be." Or he may just be rounding out his modifier with an intellectual-sounding fillip. But "nature" and "character" are powerful words, and should be used only when the speaker's remarks are sincere in quality.

While you're on guard, apply a peeled eye to other "dribble-off" constructions. Douglas Chapman 3rd of Chapel Hill, N.C., protests the proliferation of "emergency situation" (an emergency is a situation), "precautionary measure" (a precaution is a measure) and "thunderstorm activity" (inactive thunderstorms are rare).

Fight dribbling off. Avoid verbiage.

Verbiage

"The verbiage can be argued," said Sen. Robert Byrd about whether the War Powers Act applied to the rescue raid launched into Iran, "but in spirit and intent I don't think there was any violation."

The second meaning of "verbiage" in several dictionaries is "style or manner of expression," and the senator can find support for use of the word in that. But such a definition has mainly to do with diction.

The meaning of "verbiage" to most of us is not "wording," as Sen. Byrd wanted to say, but a running on at the mouth or typewriter. Excessiveness is built into the primary meaning, as if "verb," for "word," were being melded with "foliage" or "garbage."

"Wording" is one thing; "wordiness" — or "verbiage" — another. Let's leave it at that.

Pablo Picasso at work

Picasso 'greatest show on earth'

By JOHN HEILPERN

NEW YORK — The vast crowds flocking to what is described as The Greatest Show on Earth, namely the largest Picasso retrospective ever seen, rushed into the Museum of Modern Art on its opening day last month as if for a department store sale.

One felt the first customer through the doors should have received a special prize. The first of an expected one million visitors became a mere celebrity instead, confidently waving to the TV cameras like a presidential candidate. "Get ready boys!" he called to the TV crews as the doors opened at last to Picasso. "Here we go!"

The entire museum, all three floors, has been taken over by 1,000 Picassos, making it the biggest exhibition in the museum's history. "It's going to be bigger than Tut," I was told. "And you can't get any bigger than that."

To pass in front of each of the 1,000 Picasso paintings, sculptures, collages, drawings, prints and ceramics, visitors will walk an estimated three miles — thereby simultaneously satisfying the New Yorkers' passion for art and exercise. The Picasso show has become the artistic way to jog.

Already 250,000 tickets have been sold. The cost of the colossal exhibition is $2 million. Four thousand art critics from all countries have attended special previews.

The exhibition, which took three years to organize, has been put together after intense negotiations with foreign governments, other museums and private collectors by William Rubin, director of the museum, and Dominique Bozo, chief curator of the Musee Picasso in Paris. Only the Soviet government, in the wake of the U.S. Olympic boycott, refused to co-operate and cancelled its loan of 12 major Picassos.

The idea for the exhibition first came to Rubin when he visited Picasso at his villa in the south of France in 1972. Seeing the studio jammed with hundreds of "Picasso's Picassos," he was struck by what he describes as a sense of wonder and vertigo. He offered Picasso the whole of the Museum of Modern Art. The painter was at first amused and then agreed. A few months later, Picasso died at 91 — leaving behind 45,000 works, no will, and a six-year legal battle over his $400 million estate.

Awesome logistical problems caused by the exhibition have involved vast insurance policies, security against spectacular art thefts, and the transportation of each Picasso work into the museum accompanied by personal courier from all parts of the world.

In order to study the movement of great numbers of people through a fixed object, the museum curators have sought the advice of airport crowd controllers, Radio City Music Hall, Disney World, and an expert called "a Pedestrian Traffic Engineer."

The Pedestrian Traffic Engineer concluded that potential problems of traffic flow would be solved if 500 visitors were allowed into the museum every half hour — and came out again. Previews have revealed that visitors spend an average of two hours viewing the masterpieces of almost 80 years of Picasso's life, and those who spend up to three hours limp out exhausted.

On the first day, the crowd control system appeared to be running smoothly with occasional bottlenecks in the region of 'Guernica' and 'Seated Female Nude With Crossed Legs.' New Yorkers, always an exuberant audience, reacted to the Picassos with a mixture of awe and characteristic good humor.

Two ladies puzzled by a cubist canvass entitled 'Woman With a Zither': "Do you see the woman?" "Ruthie, I don't even see the zither."

Married couple peering at 'Science and Charity' painted by Picasso at 16: "How old was he when he did this — four?" "He was five." "Makes no difference — he sure could paint."

Old friends greeting each other: "Are you getting culture, Henry?" "I'm getting a hernia."

Other overheards:

"See, he got the hands wrong there. Believe me, I know from art class. Hands aren't easy."

"I hope he did that on purpose."

"Do you paint like this?" "Not quite."

Child to mother: "Frankly, this isn't my favorite period."

Two old ladies having furious argument: "Piece of crap!" "Muriel, that's the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard you say in my life." "I don't want to talk about it now, Gloria."

Exhausted man approaching the 1940 Picassos: "It's fantastic but I'm kind of longing for this guy to die."

Discussion of family portraits: "If you ask me, he didn't care about his family." "How do you know?" "I know. He was totally into himself, just like Pavarotti."

Happy lady returning from loo: "I just saw myself in the mirror and I couldn't believe it — two eyes, one nose, and a mouth!"

In praise of housewifery

By JUDITH FINLAYSON
The Globe and Mail

Of all the myths about women that permeate our society, perhaps none is more damaging than the stereotypical housewife. Consistently depicted by advertisers as a simpleminded hysteric who can barely cope with ring around the collar, she is rarely given credit for managing her own, let alone anyone else's life. When real crises strike, masculine intervention is deemed essential, in the person of the Man from Glad, or a reasonable facsimile thereof. The subliminal message is that women — especially housewives — are incompetent.

In actual fact, however, the occupation of housewife fosters the development of many valuable skills. When psychologist Abraham Maslow decided to study creativity, for example, he was surprised to find that a full-time housewife and mother was as original, inventive and creative as the artists, musicians and writers he'd established as standards.

So why do our negative judgments of housewifery persist? Basically because we live in a sexist society which undervalues women's work. As a result, more and more women are feeling pressured to return to the work force. The problem is that in the process they're being forced to confront a near denial of their identity.

Most employers treat housewifery as an extended period of unemployment during which no experience is gained. But actual examination of what it takes to run a home and nurture children reveals extensive training in a wide variety of managerial skills. Housewives must be self-starting, conscientious and dependable. Like executives, they are constantly prepared to confront crises, and can not take sick days at whim. Balancing the budget is part of the act, as is inventive menu-planning when money's short, not to mention creative decorating with raw materials from the Salvation Army. In other words, just about the only problem with housewifery as a career training program is that too few people see it in that light.

Recently I spoke with Eleanor Berman, a woman who successfully returned to full-time work after more than 10 years at home, and who has written a how-to guide called Re-Entering. In writing her book, Miss Berman drew from her own experience as well as other women's, and all the stories of women who have done extremely well in the work force share a common theme. They feel their success is directly linked to the skills they developed running a home.

For example, Rena Bartos. As a recent cover of Ms magazine proclaimed, "When Rena Bartos talks, Madison Avenue listens." And yet, Rena Bartos, a senior vice-president of J. Walter Thompson, the world's largest advertising agency, credits the 10 years she spent at home with her children for most of her success.

It taught her to deal with people as individuals, which forms the basis of her shrewd marketing perspective. She was among the first in the business to suggest, for instance, that agency copywriters work with the consumers they were writing for, a practice that's been widely adopted.

Moreover, Mrs. Bartos believes that her maturity and life experience were advantageous because they made the corporate superstructure seem less intimidating. "Coming back, I could see how much the agency functioned just like the PTA, and I developed what I call 'the Dr. Spock theory of advertising.' Dealing with many of the more explosive executives is much like talking to a 3-year-old with a tantrum. You learn to be calm, consistent, to stand your ground."

Berman's book is filled with similar stories. Her research indicates that most women do experience a real ego boost from proving themselves outside the home, but at the same time, she feels some caution should be exercised. "It's terrible if women are feeling so pressured to work that they're giving up the irreplaceable rewards of being at home when their children are young."

WINDING UP A YARN can be tough for some long-winded story tellers, but at Firestone's synthetic fibres plant in Hopewell, Va. it's no trouble at all. Seen here, an inspector checks over lengths of polyester yarn being wound onto cylinders. The company estimates that more than 102-million kilograms of the yarn, used in making tire cord fabric, will be used by the North American tire industry this year.

Things are booming at VSE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A trading bonanza has given the Vancouver Stock Exchange record profits, forced a move to larger premises and forged a new financial link with its Alberta counterpart.

The VSE annual report shows a net profit of $840,578 on revenue of $4.86 million for the year ended March 31, up from $124,046 on revenue of $2.87 million for the same period last year.

At a news conference Ian Falconer, outgoing exchange chairman, said rapidly-increasing volume — 912.8 million shares with a value of $1.4 billion in the 1979 calendar year — is due mainly to increased activity in oil and natural gas issues by national and international investors.

The trading frenzy has taxed existing VSE facilities and led to an agreement in principle with Cadillac Fairview Corp. Ltd. to move the exchange from its 16-year-old Howe Street building to new 40,000-square-foot quarters in Pacific Centre's third tower, to be known as Stock Exchange Tower.

Occupancy is expected in the late spring or early summer of 1981.

B.C.-Alberta securities links will also be improved with the announcement that the Alberta Stock Exchange has acquired a 25-per-cent interest in the VSE's Service Corp., a wholly-owned VSE subsidiary which handles internal accounting and currently holds 360 million shares on deposit.

Bob Scott, VSE president, said the deal is a step toward "a solid, unified Western presence in the securities field."

"Perhaps one day, with any luck, we'll end up with a Western Canadian stock exchange rather than Vancouver and Alberta exchanges."

Scott said the VSE is aggressively courting junior mining companies from all over North America because of reluctance by the Toronto Stock Exchange to accept them.

"We have the background and willingness to accept the risk posed by junior mining companies."

Scott said 1980 is shaping up as another record year for the VSE with volume for the first four months of the year already ahead of last year's total.

More than 600 million shares with a value of about $1.5 billion were traded to last Friday and Scott predicted a 1980 value of more than $2 billion, depending on world economic conditions.

Statistics from the Toronto Stock Exchange show volume of trading on Canadian stock exchanges for the first five months of this year soared more than 100 per cent from the same period last year.

Preliminary figures show volumes on the Toronto, Vancouver, Montreal and Alberta markets for January to the end of May totalled 1.79 billion shares, compared with 878.8 million shares in the first five months of 1979.

Total dollar value of the shares traded on all four markets climbed 104.7 per cent to $16.1 billion from $7.88 billion.

In Toronto, the number of shares traded last month increased by 18.5 per cent 116.8 million, up from 98.6 million in May, 1979. Value for the month was $1.7 billion, up 8.3 per cent from $1.6 billion.

Volume of shares traded at the Montreal market in May rose 26.9 per cent to 18.4 million, up from 14.5 million the same month last year. But total dollar value for the month dropped 8.1 per cent to $260.5 million from $283.4 million in May, 1979.

Newest corporate name also Canada's biggest

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's newest and biggest corporate name — Hiram Walker-Consumers Home Ltd. — has issued its first financial report showing net earnings of $131.9 million or $1.82 a share for the six months ended March 31.

Comparative net earnings for a year ago, based on combining the results of Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts and Consumers' Gas Co. which merged early this year to form the new corporation, would have been $111.8 million or $1.62 a share.

The Home in the new corporate name comes from Home Oil Co., which had been taken over by Consumers before it merged with Hiram Walker.

The financial report showed revenue of $1.4 billion for the six months, compared with $1.27 billion a year ago.

Assets totalled $3.2 billion, against $2.3 billion.

The report said higher selling prices in the distilled spirits segment of the business improved operating margins.

West struggling to cut dependence on OPEC as fiscal crisis looms

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times

NEW YORK — There is growing recognition in Washington and other Western capitals that the industrialized countries cannot solve the problems of chronic inflation and economic stagnation unless they liberate themselves from the power of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to force oil prices ever higher and to disrupt supplies.

One sign of the toughened mood is the American decision to resume filling strategic petroleum reserves despite the opposition of Saudi Arabia. The Saudis had kept promising higher oil production and so-called price moderation — and threatening disruption and cutbacks unless the United States kept its oil reserves very low. The Louisiana supply domes now hold only 93 million barrels of a planned billion-barrel oil supply.

The United States intends to fill the stockpile to its present capacity, 250 million barrels, as soon as possible. That would replace less than 40 days of imports, should they be cut off. American oil imports are now running at seven million barrels a day, and total consumption is 17 million barrels a day. Congress appears determined to fund the building of the stockpile to the billion-barrel capacity.

Further evidence of the determination to reduce the West's economic vulnerability to OPEC was the recent decision at the Paris meeting of the 21-nation International Energy Agency to reduce oil imports during the next five years to 22 million barrels a day. The agency's old target had been 26 million barrels a day. In 1979, the industrial countries imported 23 million barrels a day.

"There was general recognition in Paris," says Richard Cooper, Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, "that energy policy is inseparable from macroeconomic policy, and that, if we don't get energy policy right, we will be plagued indefinitely in the macro area."

The acceleration of inflation throughout the industrial world in the last year resulted largely from OPEC price increases. Now, with the recession hitting the United States and with growth slowing in Europe, the inflation rate is coming down. Charles Schultze, President Carter's chief economic adviser, expects the American inflation rate to fall below 10 per cent this summer.

But the slowdown in the American and world economy, while reducing the demand for oil, is likely to be matched by new OPEC efforts to restrict supplies even more, to keep oil prices firm and rising. The cut in oil supplies could intensify the slump in Western industrial production.

In the last year, despite overall sluggish demand, oil prices climbed 150 per cent. That enormous increase threatens to intensify world monetary instability by worsening the problem of OPEC's surpluses and the industrial and developing countries' deficits. The United States government is projecting the net OPEC balance-of-payments surplus this year at $115 billion. The cumulative surplus, according to United States estimates, is likely to exceed $300 billion in the next four years — assuming there is no "dramatic increase," as Cooper puts it, in world oil prices.

But that is obviously a dubious assumption in the light of OPEC's history and its increasing skill at restraining supplies.

Worries about the world monetary system are mounting. The International Monetary Fund is working on concrete proposals for rescuing countries in trouble. The concern is that the private banking system will no longer be able to function as it did during the 1970's. Such countries as Jamaica, Turkey, Bangladesh and Pakistan are already having no luck in borrowing from private institutions. And falling copper prices are hurting Zambia and Zaire.

United States officials, while saying that no worldwide financial crisis appears imminent in 1980, are warning the dangers could become urgent in 1981.

BCRIC CanCel takeover goes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. is to become a wholly-owned subsidiary of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp., BCRIC president David Helliwell said Friday.

BCRIC has been successful in its bid to obtain slightly more than 90 per cent of the publicly-held shares of CanCel and will exercise its right under the British Columbia Company Act to acquire the remaining shares held by public shareholders, he said.

The acquisition of all publicly held shares at $15 a share makes the purchase worth about $36.2 million.

Raindrops kept falling on their mortarboards Saturday but faces were bright as more than 1,000 degrees were conferred at 17th annual UVic convocation

The rain and grey skies were merely academic

Unsettled weather and a pall of grey sky was merely academic for thousands who attended and took part in University of Victoria graduation ceremonies Saturday.

Improvised plastic capes shielded many from showers as more than 1,000 gowned students filed to McKinnon centre for the conferring of graduate and undergraduate degrees.

Two ceremonies — at 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. — were arranged to accommodate the parents, relatives or close friends of those receiving degrees, filling the gymnasium to standing room only.

Both events were followed by a reception in the old gym, and Saturday night Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving was host to a dinner for members of the senate, special guests and other dignitaries.

The 17th convocation honored two outstanding British Columbians. Honorary degrees were conferred on Victoria wildlife painter Fenwick Lansdowne, 42, and Mr. Justice Tom Berger, of the B.C. Supreme Court, who was born in Victoria.

In case you're wondering

They pay their way to march

We watched the Victoria Day Parade and wondered how so many visiting bands are housed and fed during their stay? C.E.W.

This year 37 bands visited with a total of 2,800 musicians and assistants.

Mabelle Murphy, co-ordinator of the Greater Victoria Festival Society which organizes the event, says most bands stay in motels and make their own arrangements, working throughout the year to pay for the trip.

A few stay in one of six school auditoriums and are charged a nominal fee. For security reasons, only six auditoriums are used — they're the only ones that aren't connected to the school itself.

Others stay in residences at the University of Victoria at reasonable rates.

Murphy said it's becoming expensive for bands to attend the parade because housing, food and transportation costs are increasing.

Nevertheless, bands from the U.S. like to come to the Victoria parade.

It's lucky, too, because Victoria only has three marching bands, she said, and many Canadian bands want to have their expenses paid to attend the parade.

Tillicum lawsuit up in air

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier hasn't made up his mind whether to sue Capital Region District chairman James Campbell.

Couvelier said today he is still considering the suit he threatened Friday after the chairman released a statement on the mayor's role in the Tillicum shopping centre controversy.

"I don't have to do it right away," he added.

He said he doesn't want the private row to interfere with a proposal Saanich is making to the CRD.

Couvelier said Campbell will call a special regional board meeting this week to discuss the offer.

Saanich is proposing the CRD hold a public meeting to listen to Tillicum developers Cal Investments Ltd. explain its $30 million shopping centre proposal.

Any decision would be non-binding on Saanich and Cal.

City group seeks ad-free TV

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A Victoria group announced today it plans to apply for a licence to broadcast commercial-free television on Channel 10.

The CFRE Public Broadcasting Society, formed last week, wants the last VHF television frequency available in the northwest for Canada's first non-profit, non-commercial video outlet, president Kim Martin told the Times today.

Programming would be similar to that offered on KCTS, Channel 9, the U.S. Public Broadcasting System outlet in Seattle.

"There's one VHF station left — it's up for grabs," he said. CFRE — the proposed call letters for the station — plans to apply this fall to the Canadian Radio, Television and Telecommunications Commission for the frequency.

It is also CFRE's hope to obtain the new quarters at Blanshard and Kings intended as CBC broadcast studios but which have been empty for two years.

There have been several tentative proposals already by commercial broadcasters for Channel 10, which had been reserved for the CBC until it cancelled plans for a Victoria station because of budget restrictions.

Western Approaches, which has UHF Channel 21 in Vancouver, has expressed interest in acquiring both the frequency and the building for use a production centre.

Martin hopes the CRTC will go for CFRE's (pronounced Sea-Free) plans.

The society grew out of a public meeting called by the Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C., a Vancouver-based organization headed by playwright Herschel Hardin, who is also the main organizer behind the Capital Cable Co-op.

Martin heads the new organization, which has about 150 supporters who have paid $5 memberships. Martin has a bachelor of science degree in psychology and drives a truck for a living.

"This is my fulltime mental activity," he said.

Other members of CFRE have experience in broadcasting and other fields. Former mayor Peter Pollen has also been involved, Martin said.

The CBC no longer represents the ideal it started with decades ago, Martin said.

"Public broadcasting started in Canada as a concept a long time ago but the CBC has degenerated," he said.

"There are a lot of people who want to see commercial-free broadcasting. It's the interruptions, it's the constant hard sell that are offensive."

The society plans a television station which will be regionally and provincially oriented rather than one primarily focussed on Victoria.

—Bill Halkett

Martin and empty CBC building

He emphasized that CFRE programming would be different from the kind of local public affairs broadcasting which now appears on Channel 10

Initially, much of CFRE's programming would be borrowed from TV Ontario.

KCTS has also promised support, Martin said.

Car hits ditch, driver fair

The driver of a car which struck a ditch at high speed on Patricia Bay Highway Saturday night is in fair condition with head and back injuries.

Saanich police said James Hoggan, 40, of 2425 Amelia was southbound in the 6100-block when his car left the road and was demolished.

Another driver was arrested and was to be charged with dangerous driving on Patricia Bay Highway after a high-speed chase which began at Quadra and ended at an RCMP roadblock in North Saanich shortly before 3 a.m. Sunday.

Duncan RCMP reported a crash on the Trans-Canada Highway at Sprott Road north of the city.

A car driven south at 8:50 a.m. Sunday by Jean R. Seright, 49, of Victoria left the road, struck a meridian and flew 265 feet before striking a fence and tree, causing it to catch fire.

Seright and her 11-year-old son were taken to Cowichan District Hospital with undetermined injuries and the boy was transferred later to Victoria.

A similar accident early Saturday afternoon occurred on Sooke Road east of Cooper's Cove on rain-dampened pavement when a car rolled after hitting a ditch and caught fire.

The driver got out, reached in to turn off the racing engine, then collapsed. A witness said he was bleeding from a head injury.

Police said they were not informed of the accident.

Ottawa housing neglect rapped

By AL FORREST

British Columbia must speak with a louder voice in Ottawa — but not threaten to leave Canada, B.C. Real Estate Association President George Yen said today.

The west coast is suffering from neglect.

"They don't know we're out here."

A vivid example of this, he said, is Ottawa's failure to do anything about the housing crisis in the west.

"All they see is that the vacancy rate in Quebec and Ontario is between five and eight per cent.

"In British Columbia the vacancy rate is almost nil."

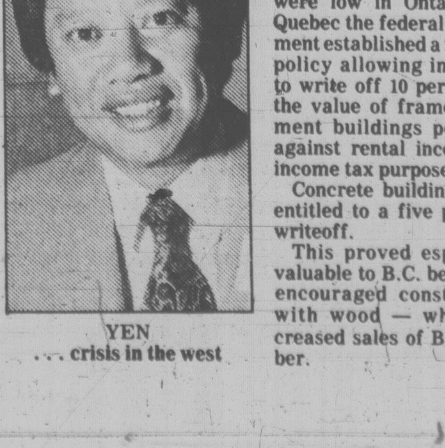
And the problem will get worse because people are moving to British Columbia where the economy is strong.

Yen, a former president of the Greater Vancouver Real Estate Association, said federal neglect is creating a feeling of anger across British Columbia but it falls short of wanting to leave Canada.

Yen made the comments in an interview at the beginning of the BCREA convention at the Empress.

He said concerns about rental accommodation and interest rates will dominate the meetings.

A delegation of real estate officials likely will go to Ottawa to ask Prime Minister Trudeau to reinstate capital cost allowances to spur apartment construction in the west, Yen said.



YEN
. . . crisis in the west

When vacancy rates were low in Ontario and Quebec the federal government established a national policy allowing investors to write off 10 per cent of the value of frame apartment buildings per year against rental income for income tax purposes.

Concrete buildings were entitled to a five per cent writeoff.

This proved especially valuable to B.C. because it encouraged construction with wood — which increased sales of B.C. lumber.

The restoration of a 10 per cent writeoff is needed now, Yen said.

The vacancy rate should be in the range of three to four per cent at all times, he said.

Yen said the real estate industry is pleased to see mortgage interest rates easing.

"I would think there will be a further move downwards but it is difficult to know how close we are to the bottom."

Yen said the BCREA approves of recent actions by the provincial government in the real estate field, especially the program of making special mortgage rates available for low-income families.

Stargazers in line for a treat

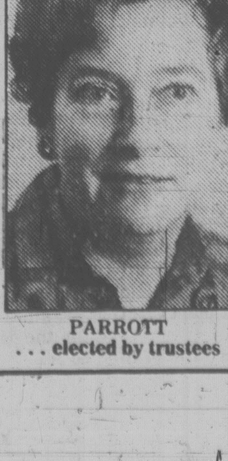
If the weather improves after sunset skywatchers should be able to see an unusual event in the western sky.

Mars, Jupiter and Saturn are in fairly close proximity, but are moving further apart and will be aligned with Venus in a few months, said astrophysical obervatory director Dr. Sidney van den Bergh.

"It is quite an impressive sight to see these planets so close in the sky," he said.

But in his view they looked even better last month when Regulus was "kind of in between Mars and Jupiter," giving a tricolored effect.

Parrott heads national body



PARROTT
. . . elected by trustees

Saanich school trustee Rubymay Parrott today was elected president of the Canadian School Trustees Association at its annual meeting in Montreal.

The former District 63 chairman was president last year of the B.C. School Trustees Association, and is attending the Montreal convention at Queen Elizabeth Hotel along with current district chairman Lois Walsh and trustee John Betts.

After brooming, Lions start hunt for field leaders

COURTENAY — B.C. Lions are conducting the annual search for talent show at their Canadian Football League training camp and the stage is much larger than ever before for head coach Vic Rapp.

Rapp's team is without an acknowleged leader heading into the exhibition season following an off-season house cleaning which eliminated such leaders as Jerry Tagge, Larry Watkins, Jim Young and Doug Carlson.

The Lions, floundering on the brink of financial ruin, are desperate to find the individual or group of players necessary to make them legitimate contenders in the Western Conference in 1980.

Whether Rapp's brooming of the veterans was by design or not is anyone's guess, but the end result left the Lions without some of the intangibles needed to be succesful in professional football.

Tagge, the quarterback who led them to a 10-6 season in 1977, failed to pass his medical examination following knee surgery in January. The operation was delayed almost five months following his injury last August in Hamilton.

Watkins, a veteran offensive tackle, retired after the 1979 season when the Lions finished third in the WFC, then were humiliated 37-2 by Calgary Stampeders in the conference semi-finals. He was Rapp's pipeline to the players, a man who provided communication between the coach and his men.

★ ★ ★

Young, the leading pass receiver in B.C. history, was asked to retire by the team after 13 seasons. He didn't want to quit, believing his skills as a receiver would compensate for a lack of foot speed.

Carlson, a safety, was traded to Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference for veteran Tony Proudfoot. Carlson was not a sure tackler, but Proudfoot has a history of injuries.

Rapp hopes that young quarterback Joe Paopao matures this year and can be held in esteem by his fellow players like Tagge before him. Paopao played last season after Tagge was injured and, after a brief flirt with the record books and success, found that being consistent is a lot tougher than it looks.

The Lions lost their last four league games in 1979 after spurting to a 9-2-1 start. Then came the disaster of the playoffs in Calgary.

Paopao will get competition from holdover Mike Nott and rookies Rick Bashore of UCLA and Roy Dewalt of Texas-Arlington, all classified as Canadians.

★ ★ ★

Dewalt was taken in the ninth round of the National League draft by Cleveland Browns, which projected Dewalt as a running back. The young signal-caller elected to head north because Rapp promised him a shot at quarterback.

"He's out of the same mold as Edmonton's Warren Moon, except he's bigger and faster," Rapp said.

"His exceptional running ability is going to add a new dimension to our game. On top of that, he's an excellent guy — an intelligent, high-character type."

For any of the quarterbacks to survive, however, the offensive line will have to improve. The Lions were plagued by holding calls last season which left the team in long yardage situations far too often for Rapp to stand pat.

Early returns from camp indicate that imports Donnie Hickman, Tom Humphrey and Darius Helton have been impressive at the tackle spots. Humphrey signed with the Lions late last season after his release by Calgary. The only holdover tackle is import Jim Lohmann, often penalized for holding infractions in the past.

Rapp also wants more speed at the wide receiver positions, along with receivers who run disciplined pass routes. Leon Bright has been moved to the defensive corner, allowing the coaching staff to get a good look at Tyron Gray, occassionally impressive last year in his rookie season.

★ ★ ★

The coaches also want to bring along rookie receiver John Pankratz from Simon Fraser University, one of the team's protected players from the CFL draft. He's up against veteran Al Charuk in the early going.

Linebacker Derek Innes, the Lions' other territorial protection, suffered a knee injury early in camp and might be out for the season with ligament damage.

Defensively, the Lions want more from their pass rush, which in turn might lead to an increase in pass interceptions. Corner Ken Hinton had seven interceptions last season; no other secondary player had more than one. Hinton, Proudfoot and corner Mike Henderson are expected to beef up the defensive secondary.

Towering Louie Richardson has been moved from end to tackle in the front four, with Canadian Nick Hebeler moving to end, where Rapp hopes Hebeler's explosive speed will be beneficial.

Veteran Sam Britts is back at middle linebacker after missing half of 1979 with a knee injury. The Lions' downhill skid started after Britts' surgery.

And, it's no coincidence that the team's season ticket promotional film includes a shot of place-kicker Lui Passaglia. He often provides much of the B.C. scoring with his accurate kicking.

Field goals, however, aren't touchdowns. Leaders produce — or prevent — touchdowns, and the search goes on.

Jackson shot at in early-morning dispute

The holes in the awning were real

NEW YORK (AP) — Police charged a 25-year-old man with shooting at a trio that included New York Yankees slugger Reggie Jackson following a dispute on a Manhattan street early Sunday.

Angel Viera of Manhattan was charged with attempted murder, reckless endangerment and possession of a deadly weapon following the 2 a.m. incident, police said.

Jackson later said the incident was "all blown out of proportion — the three shots were fired in the air."

"Two guys in a car were blocking the street. I said to the one, 'Hey, let me get by,' and he shook his head," Jackson said. "I pulled by and went up to the light and stopped.

"The guy on the passenger side started yelling racial slurs. Two guys off the street recognized me and offered to help."

Jackson and Viera got out of their cars and began shouting at each other, police said, when a passenger in Viera's car suddenly threw a bottle at Jackson.

Jackson, who has been bothered by a slight leg injury, and the two other persons, identified as William Paul Mangual of Brooklyn and Thomas Setteducato of Staten Island, chased Viera.

At a corner, police said Viera pulled out a .38-calibre pistol gun and fired three shots.

The shots missed all three and no one was injured.

"We were laughing because we didn't really think the gun was real," Jackson said. "But later, we saw three holes in an awning."

Jackson was on his way to an East Side night spot when the incident occurred.

THE SQUEEZE is on former Victorian Bob Bolitho, now a member of Vancouver Whitecaps, in North American Soccer League game at Detroit, Saturday. He was caught in middle of Detroit Express players Jim Hagan (14) and David McGill in front of Express goal. Whitecaps won 1-0. (AP wirephoto)

Linesman victim of attack

Times News Services

A linesman got all the worst of it in North American Soccer League action at Washington Sunday.

Gordon Arrowsmith was pushed by a player, knocked to the ground by a fan and hit on the head with a missile thrown from the stands as New York Cosmos defeated Washington Diplomats 2-1.

Vladisalav Bogkevic scored the only goal in a shootout to decide the game.

A crowd of 53,351 fans was on hand. The huge turnout was the largest in the NASL this year and broke the home attendence record for RFK Stadium of 35,620 set in 1975.

The Diplomats dominated play in the first half, with defender Bob Iarusci giving Washington a 1-0 margin in the 35th minute by converting a penalty.

Giorgio Chinaglia evened the match for the Cosmos in the 56th minute when he went high in the air to head in Alberto's perfect cross from eight yards out.

In the 86th minute, the Dips' Greene scored what appeared to be the winning goal. However, Arrowsmith ruled Ken Mokgojoa guilty of dangerous play.

At this point, the Dips' Horvath pushed Arrowsmith and drew a red card.

An irate fan came on to the field and pushed Arrowsmith to the ground.

Moments later, Arrowsmith was hit by a missile from the stands and went down again. He suffered a cut over his eye but continued in the game.

During the ensuing argument, Cruyff received a red card for verbal dissension. Both Horvath and Cruyff will miss the Dips' next home game because of the red cards.

In Toronto , a strong offensive output and key checking provided Toronto Blizzard with a 4-2 victory over Dallas Tornado and vaulted the Blizzard from last place to second in the National Conference East Division.

Drew Busby scored two goals and assisted on another to pace the Blizzard attack. Gordon Swetzer, who also had three assists, and Jim Bone completed the Toronto scoring.

In other NASL games, Edmonton blanked San Diego 1-0, California edged San Jose 3-2, and Philadelphia dumped New England 5-2.

Sweeper Dwight Lodeweges scored on a penalty kick with 42 seconds left in the game to give Edmonton its victory over San Diego.

In games Saturday, Vancouver Whitecaps blanked Detroit Express 1-0, Fort Lauderdale doubled Portland 4-2, Memphis shutout Atlanta 3-0, Tampa Bay dumped Tulsa 3-1, Minnesota edged Houston 2-1, Seattle trounced Rochester 5-1, and Chicago beat Los Angeles 2-1.

A first-half goal by Trevor Whymark was all the Whitecaps needed to post their triumph over Detroit before a season-high crowd of 17,382 at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Whitecaps' netminder Bruce Grobbelaar weathered a furious Express attack in the second half to get the shutout, making a total of four saves.

Detroit outshot Vancouver 15-13, but their record fell to 3-7. The Whitecaps, defending NASL champs, are now 5-6.

Dale chips grand-slam

By The Canadian Press

Dale Berra might not be exactly a chip off the old block — but he does get good wood on the ball from time to time.

Sunday was one of those times.

The son of hall of famer Yogi Berra knocked in five runs, four with a grand slam homer, to help Pittsburgh Pirates beat New York Mets 13-3 Sunday.

"It's the biggest home run so far for me, and coming against a New York team makes it extra nice," said Berra. "I always get a little more excited when we play against the Mets because my dad managed and coached them for so many years."

The younger Berra played shortstop for the Pirates only because Tim Foli is on the disabled list. He made good use of his time, also collecting an RBI single and a double for his day's work. Before this command performance, Berra had collected only four RBI for the season.

"And he used our television to do that," said Mets manager Joe Torre with a smile. "Yogi was probably in the clubhouse (in New York) watching."

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago Cubs edged Philadelphia Phillies 5-4; Atlanta Braves pounded Los Angeles Dodgers 9-5; San Francisco Giants beat Houston Astros 6-2; Cincinnati Reds nipped San Diego Padres 7-6 and Montreal Expos stopped St. Louis Cardinals 7-6 in 12 innings.

Berra's grand slam, the first of his major league career, capped a seven-run fifth inning for the Pirates.

In the American League, Boston Red Sox pitchers were having all kinds of problems figuring out the hitters on Milwaukee Brewers.

If you get by Paul Molitor, the league's top hitter with a .364 average, there are still Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper, who are tied for fourth in the league at .343. And if you get by them, you must still face Ben Oglivie, hitting .320 and leading the AL in home runs with 12, and Gorman Thomas, last year's home run champion.

You can also understand why the Red Sox are glad to see the Brewers leave town.

With Molitor, Yount, Cooper, etc., doing their thing, the Brewers put together an eight-run inning for the second straight day Sunday to defeat Boston 8-5.

Saturday, the Brewers scored eight runs in the second inning en route to a 19-8 blasting of Boston.

Legion adds strength; Eastern player signed

Esquimalt Legion might have a little more experience and firepower in the lineup Tuesday while facing Coquitlam Adanacs in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Legion signed Sean Doyle, 19, a right-hander from Brampton Excelsiors, Saturday, and he is expected to play against Coquitlam providing B.C. Lacrosse Association approval is received in time.

Esquimalt manager Bob Reid doesn't expect any problems completing the switch and said Doyle should add a little more consistancy to the Esquimalt odd-man play.

Doyle, who stands six-foot-one and weighs 185 pounds, scored 84 points last season, including 50 goals.

Meanwhile, Ross Angelucci scored three goals and added an assist to lead visiting New Westminster Salmonbellies to a 15-11 victory over Burnaby Cablevision in a game Sunday before 250 fans.

Ali suffering from brain damage?

LONDON (AP) — Muhammad Ali, in training for a summer bid to regain the world heayweight boxing title, appears to be suffering from brain damage and should not fight again, a British neurologist was quoted as saying Sunday.

The physician, who was not identified, was asked by the Sunday Times to study films of Ali taken in 1970, 1978 and 1979 following reports that close relations and others, including doctors and World Boxing Council president Jose Sulaiman, have urged Ali not to fight again.

The London specialist said the films showed a marked deterioration in the 38-year-old boxer's speech and movements.

"His (Ali's) speech disturbance most likely reflects the cumulative effects of repeated microscopic brain damage sustained during his career," the specialist, reported to have had considerable experience with brain-damaged boxers, said.

The London specialist said that in the first film, when Ali was 29, the boxer's speech was clear and rapid, his face normally expressive and his thinking and movements brisk.

In the 1978 and 1979 television interviews, "his articulation was slurred and imprecise, his face somewhat impassive and his speech and movement generally much slower," the specialist said.

Taxi squads official?

TORONTO (CP) — Taxi squads are expected to become part of the Canadian Football League today.

Executives of all nine clubs will be on their telephones for a conference call to vote on the issue.

If six of the nine clubs approve the idea it will go into effect immediately.

The CFL general managers recommended the formation of a reserve list of taxi squad last month in Winnipeg.

Stockers give Alphas fight before dropping twin bill

Alpha Sports had a tough time disposing of Stockers North Americans in both ends of a Vancouver Senior Women's Softball League doubleheader Sunday at Hyacinth Park

The defending Canadian champions from Vancouver took the first game 6-4 in eight innings and then won the last contest 4-3 despite being outhit by the Victoria club, 9-4.

On Saturday, Stockers split a double-bill against Vancouver Lehr Construction at Heywood Avenue Park, winning the first 1-0 but dropping the second, 4-3.

Rosemary Fuller, a former Victorian, picked up both pitching wins Sunday.

Fuller struck out six and walked none while scattering eight hits in the opener while Patti McGuire set the batting pace for Alpha Sports with four hits in five trips to the plate to drive in two runs.

In the second game, Fuller came on to relieve starter Tracy Huckack during the fourth inning, and held Stockers to three hits the rest of the way.

Heather Cranston drove in the winning run in both games.

In the second game, Lori Skinner set the pace for Stocker batters with a three-for-four performance while clubmate Lee Wallace went two-for-three.

On Saturday, Lisa Hayton recorded the pitching win for Stockers with a three-hitter and helped her own cause by singling in the lone run of the game.

Marina Van As outduelled Debbie Derkson of Stockers in the second contest.

Derkson was three-for-three at the plate.

Pit stop for a flat costs Smith victory

BURNABY — Roy Smith of Victoria placed second in an open competition stock car race Sunday at the nearby Westwood road circuit.

Smith, who set a track record of one minute, 12.44 seconds for the 1.4-mile course, had to pit for a flat tire on his 1969 Camaro while leading the race in the fourth lap.

The Victoria driver made up most of the time lost in the 75-mile race but couldn't quite catch winner Hershel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore., before the checkered flag.

Ron Eaton of Tacoma was third.

Burrows' bat helps Budgets

SEATTLE — Bob Burrows helped Victoria Budgets earn a split in a Northwest Men's Fastball League doubleheader against Seattle Westside here Saturday.

Two games scheduled against Seattle Woodenville were rained out Sunday.

Burrows, playing for the first time since suffering a broken bone in his arm during a pre-season game, went into action as the designated hitter and connected for a home run in the fourth inning to give Budgets a 1-0 decision in the opener.

Mark Smith struck out 12 batters and allowed only two hits while picking up the pitching decision.

In the second game, Budget bats were less noticable and Westside claimed a 3-1 victory.

Dan Burch threw a four-hitter against Victoria.

Mike Lalonde accounted for the Budget run with a second-inning homer.

Tragedy also struck into Budget ranks at the weekend.

Pitcher Rob Guenter was en route to Toronto to join Canadian champion St. Catharines for a 10-day tour of the United States when he learned of the death of his brother, Denis, in a fire in Saskatoon. Denis, 29, who also made his mark in softball as a catcher, was a fireman.

Have you kept your old John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor safe?

John Deere durability does result in satisfied customers. But long life also calls for attention to maintenance. And maintaining the safety equipment on your tractor can be especially important.

For example, the original boot (or cover) for the battery's positive post on Model 60, 70, 100, 110, 112, 120 or 140 Tractors manufactured from 1963 through 1974 may have suffered from age or may have been lost or damaged. And if that positive battery post is not properly covered, there is danger of a spark causing a fire and bodily injury if you accidentally touch a metal gas can to the positive battery post when refueling the tractor. A more serious fire can result if you are not using a safety-approved gas can.

If you own one of the above models, John Deere wants you to make absolutely certain that your tractor has the battery's positive post properly isolated. To make it easy—and safer—for you, we will send you a new cover, free. Just fill out the coupon provided below and mail it to the address shown. It comes complete with installation instructions and is not difficult to install. But if you prefer, after you have received your kit, make a date with your John Deere Lawn and Garden Tractor dealer and he'll install it for a small service charge.

Remember, safety and maintenance go hand in hand. The operator's manual can help you. Read it again. Keep your tractor as safe as it was meant to be.

It could be the most important thing you do today.

Disabled athletes maul records

Athletes assaulted the record book during the two-day British Columbia Games for the Physically Disabled which ended Sunday.

Twenty-nine B.C. records, 12 Canadian and four world records fell as 100 athletes from B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan competed in 11 events.

Rick Hansen of Vancouver set the meet's fourth world mark and his second of the games when he won the 800 metres in two minutes, 30.8 seconds to break the old world standard of 2:38.2 set by Ron Minor of Edmonton.

On Saturday, Hansen had broken Minor's world 1,500-metre record of 4:52.6 for Class 4 athletes when he finished in 4:34.3.

A Class 4 athlete is a total paraplegic, a Class 5 is a double amputee.

Dan Westley of Vancouver won the 1,500 metres for Class 5 in 4:34.1, breaking the world mark of 4:49.3 set by Mel Fitzgerald of Newfoundland.

Top male athlete at the games was Clayton Gainer of Saskatoon, who won eight individual events plus an individual silver and a team silver.

Five of Gainer's gold medals came in shooting while the others were in javelin, discus and archery.

Top woman competitor was 18-year-old Diane Rakiecki of Penticton, who captured six track and field golds, setting a world record Saturday for the 1,500 metres and breaking the Canadian record in winning the 60, 100, 200, 400 and 800 metres.

Rakiecki wheeled the metric mile in 6:03.2 to break the recognized world mark of 6:32.5 established by Heather Williams of Toronto.

Top blind athlete was Ivy Granstrom, 69, of Vancouver who won six golds in track and field and four more in swimming.

CONCENTRATING MIGHTILY, American Jimmy Connors unloads two-handed return during French Open tennis action Sunday against Yannick Noah of France. Connors won two straight sets, 7-5, 6-4, when French rival was to abandon match because of injury. (AP Wirephoto).

Connors takes short route

PARIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors was the first man to reach the quarter-finals of the French Open tennis championships Sunday when his French opponent, Yannick Noah, slipped on the damp clay centre court of the Roland Garros Stadium and pulled a thigh muscle.

Connors, rated the strongest threat to defending champion Bjorn Borg for the $53,000 first prize, led Noah 7-5, 6-4 when the Frenchman had to default.

Rain and wind interfered with play for the second straight day. Noah, the only Frenchman still in contention, was the first casualty in the difficult conditions.

Fresh top soil was thrown on patches of the court after heavy morning rain, and it blew around in clouds during the rallies.

Connors was followed into the quarter-finals by Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States and Wojtek Fibak of Poland. Gerulaitis defeated Ferdi Taygan in an all-American duel 6-3, 7-5, 6-1, while Fibak lost three match points in the third set and had to keep playing for another hour before overcoming Australia's Paul McNamee 6-4, 6-4, 6-7 6-3.

The wind ruffled Chris Evert Lloyd, defending champion and favorite for the $42,500 women's singles prize. She had to struggle before beating 16-year-old American Bettina Bunge 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Kathy Jordan of the U.S. reached the last eight with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over highly-rated West German Sylvia Hanika, while Ivanna Madruga of Spain upset fourth-seeded Virginia Wade of Britain 6-0, 6-7, 6-2.

French hopes faded away in the dust with the elimination of the 20-year-old Noah, who reached the final of the Italian Open in Rome last week.

At 5-4 in the second set, Connors floated a drop shot over the net and caught Noah on the wrong foot. The Frenchman turned and went for the ball and fell headlong with his right leg folded under him.

That took Connors to set point.

A doctor attended Noah at the court for about four minutes before he limped back, tried to serve, lost the point and shook his head. Under the rules, Noah should not have been allowed more than 30 seconds off court.

"I don't know exactly what the rule says; but I had no intention of invoking it anyway," Connors said. "I wouldn't want to win a match that way. If he had said he wanted more time before playing on, I would have agreed."

Larrieu defeats Scott in Berkeley track meet

BERKELEY, Calif. — Debbie Scott of Victoria finished second in the women's 1,500 metres as Canadians fared well in an invitational track meet at the University of California here Sunday.

Francie Larrieu of the United States won the race in 4:11. Scott was timed on 4:11.1 and Penny Werthner Bales of Ottawa in 4:12.3.

Claude Ferragne of Montreal won the men's high jump with a leap of 2.25 metres to top three American competitors — Mike Nelson, Dwight Stones, and Rory Kotinek — all of whom cleared 2.13.

Anne Mackie-Morelli of Vancouver ran third in the women's 800 metres, finishing in 2:03.3, two seconds behind the winner, Madeline Manning of Oral Roberts.

Borys Chambul of Toronto threw the discus 64 metres to finish fourth.

In another event, Carl Lewis handed James Sanford, currently the world's top-ranked sprinter, his first 100-metre loss in almost a year.

Lewis, a freshman from New Jersey, was timed in 10.43. Sanford was second in 10.49.

Brian Oldfield went over 21 metres (70 feet) in the shot put for the fifth time this year, winning with a toss of 21.3 metres (70-11¾), and Matt Centrowitz of the Oregon Track Club matched the best 5,000-metre time in the world this year with a victory in 13 minutes 27.8 seconds.

Beth stocks up on confidence

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Beth Daniel earned her second tour victory in a two-year Ladies Professional Golf Association career Sunday with a final-round 71 for a 72-hole total of one-under-par 287 in the $125,000 Golden Lights tournament at Wykagyl Country Club.

Daniel finished two shots ahead of Jo Ann Washam and Nancy Lopez-Melton. Washam, who took herself out of contention when she double-bogeyed the par-four 17th hole on the final day, came in with a two-over-par 74. Lopez-Melton, who shot back into the tournament with a six-under 66 on Saturday, closed with a 73.

Pat Bradley and Canadian Sandra Post tied for sixth at 292.

Janet Coles and Sally Little, the co-leaders at two-under par after the third round, ballooned out of sight Sunday. Coles skied to 79 and wound up tied for eighth at 291 while Little wobbled home with an 80 for 294.

"I'm on top of the world right now," said Daniel, who won $18,750 and climbed to fifth on the 1980 money list with $68,830 in earnings. "I think I have a lot to look forward to. I feel great."

Daniel, 23, whose first LPGA win came last August at St. Paul, Minn., had been close a number of times this year.

"I've been close so many times this year, I was beginning to doubt myself," said Daniel, who won $97,037 in her rookie season. "But, it's been a learning process."

Donaldson tops Sooke golf event

Gorge Vale's Dave Donaldson fired a four-over-par 70 Sunday to capture low gross honors in the annual Sooke-Broome Hill Open golf tournament.

Donaldson finished one shot ahead of clubmate Rob McCoid and Bruce Lewis of Comox.

Low net winner was Morrie Bunyan of Broome Hill, who scored 77-12 — 56 to finish one shot ahead of Gorge Vale's Pete Krystalowich.

Jay pops the cork

Glen Jay hammered in five goals to set the pace Saturday as Victoria Goodwill Bottlers tripped Salmonbellies 16-14 in a British Columbia Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League game in New Westminster.

Frank Wendt, Steve LaPointe, Doug Barnes and Alton Davis added two goals each for Victoria and singles were contributed by Wayne Christiaens, Gordie Christiaens and Shawn Dheensaw, who also had five assists.

Don Thornhill led New Westminster with five goals.

Russell Gurney made 38 saves for Bottlers and Mike Smith blocked 41 shots on the Salmonbellies' net.

In a Sunday exhibition game at Pearkes Arena, Bottlers trampled the midget Seasprays, 21-6.

Wendt set the pace with seven goals while Ian Woodcock was the top gun for Seaspray with three goals.

John Mahaffey knows about adversities

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — John Mahaffey, winner of the $400,000 Kemper Open, suffered from polio as a child and wasn't supposed to walk again, let alone play championship golf.

Mahaffey, 32, made the disclosure Sunday after winning the Kemper Open with a 275 total, five under par over the historical 7,054-yard, par-70 Congressional Country Club course, and three strokes over Craig Stadler, the second-place finisher.

Mahaffey revealed that he had polio of the left leg at age four when he was asked how he could overcome the physical injuries he has suffered over the past few years, including a hyperextended elbow in the PGA Championshp four years ago, and still play winning golf.

"I don't talk about it but I had polio in my left leg and wasn't supposed to walk again," he said. "It's kind of tough when you go through it, seeing the other kids participate in sports.

"I got through that and played all sports. I learned at a very young age about adversity."

Mahaffey, who shot a two-under-par 68 to nail down his fifth PGA Tour title and the $72,000 first prize, did not win it easily even though he finished with a pair of birdies.

Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., had a 73 for 287 to earn $4,320. He raised his earnings this year to $67,406.

Mahaffey said he made what he described as a "senseless bogey" on No. 8 "but that may have inspired me because I played the last 10 holes better than I've ever played before."

In the 1976 PGA Championship at Congressional, Mahaffey suffered an elbow injury and was forced to withdraw. He felt the effects of the injury the following 18 months. He later suffered two other serious wrist and elbow injuries.

"I've had some good breaks," he said, "but I've had some adversities."

A new way to detect Unemployment Insurance abuse.

Most people getting unemployment insurance play by the rules. But some people don't seem to know that they can't take a job and collect benefits without telling us they're working. That's why employers are being asked to send us the starting date and Social Insurance Number or extracts from computer payroll tapes for each employee they hire or rehire. This information is cross-checked with the Social Insurance Numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface. After investigation, anyone found receiving benefits to which they are not entitled will have to repay them.

Why better control is needed.

Last year, Unemployment Insurance paid out $4 billion to help people between jobs. This included overpayments to people who took a new job while still receiving UI benefits, but failed to report their earnings.

When people collect unemployment insurance benefits they're not entitled to, overpayments result. It may be an honest mistake. Some people forget or don't understand they must tell Unemployment Insurance and report their total earnings when they start a new job. In that case, repayment is all that is required. But, a penalty or prosecution may follow when the new system detects people wrongly collecting benefits.

HIRING STATUS
ETAT

Social Insurance Numbers of newly-hired employees are now being cross-checked with those of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Only cases of potential abuse will ever surface.

If you are collecting unemployment insurance benefits and start a new job, please say so on your UI claimant report card.

Fairer for everyone.

The money you and your employer pay as unemployment insurance premiums should be used as efficiently and fairly as possible. The new program, called 'Report on Hirings', is helping us to carry out that responsibility more effectively.

Saturdays belong to Keith as Sandown mutuels hum

Saturdays at Sandown were made for Keith Quinlan.

At least up until now they have been. And who is to complain? Not Keith.

The 30-year old native of Midland, Ont., in his first season of driving at Sandown Harness Raceway, brought home three winners on Saturday's 10-race card. And that's what is becoming the habit.

It matched the same number he brought in one week ago. Going back another week, he had two.

Quinlan, who has raced at Windsor and Detroit and this past season finished fourth in the drivers standings at Cloverdale, scored on Amortizer's Beauty ($4.30) in the featured ninth, the favored Anderson Bonnios ($4.50) in the fifth and Our Boy Chester ($15.30) in the fourth. He also had a third with Recount Time in the eighth.

The feature was a thriller with all five horses in contention in the stretch run with the six-year old brown mare Amortizer's Beauty coming from off the pace for the victory, her second in a row and fifth of the year. Call N Raise was second and Satin Satan, the pacesetter, third.

Quinlan, who disposed of his stock earlier in the year, is strictly a driver at Sandown and commutes to his Langley home ever day except Friday.

He has 13 wins at the meeting and has only been blanked on one of nine days.

The mutuel handle again showed an increase and the total of $159,049 was a high for this meeting and the second best on record, only being surpassed by the 1979 closing-day total of $164,410.

The 10th race, with its featured triactor, interested the fans to most as they wagered almost #30,000 on the result.

The triactor of Nevercantell ($6.30), Pineland N, which had his five-race winning streak shattered, and Phantom Dancer returned $131.50.

Springboks end Lions long streak

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — A last-minute try by scrum half Divan Serfontein gave South African Springboks a 26-22 first-test victory over the touring British Lions Saturday in an international rugby match.

Determined forward play in the corner led to Serfontein touching down to end the Lions' 28-game unbeaten run in South Africa. The Lions, formed from British and Irish players, last tasted defeat by a 19-6 margin in the fourth test of a 1968 series. The Springboks, who led 16-9 at halftime, had tries from R. Louw, W. DuPlessis, M. Van Heerden and G. Germishuys as well as Serfontein. Botha supplied three conversions. G. Price had a try for the Lions and T. Ward had five penalties and a dropped goal.

Japanese boxer keeps WBA title

KOCHI, Japan (AP) — Yoko Gushiken of Japan retained his World Boxing Association junior flyweight title Sunday by knocking out Chilean challenger Martin Vargas at 1:42 of the eighth round.

Preakness appeal goes to race body

Times News Services

A public hearing on the controversial decision of the stewards at Pimlico Race Course who disallowed a foul claim by Preakness runner-up Genuine Risk was to start today before the thoroughbred board of the Maryland Racing Commission.

At issue is a decision by Pimlico's three stewards who rejected the foul claim against Codex and his jockey, Angel Cordero, lodged by Jacinto Vasquez, Genuine Risk's jockey in the May 17 Preakness Stakes.

In his foul claim, Vasquez contended Cordero purposely steered Codex toward the outside and then bumped the filly as the field neared the top of the stretch during the race. The jockey also claimed Cordero hit Genuine Risk across the face several times with his crop. That claim was also rejected by the stewards.

Meanwhile at Ruidoso Downs, lightly-regarded Clever Bug ran the best race of his brief career, scoring a wire-to-wire victory Sunday in the $504,500 Kansas Futurity, the first of the three major stakes races for two-year-old quarter-horses.

Ridden by Nicky Wilson, 21, Clever Bug broke on top next to the rail in the 350-yard sprint and scored a length victory over favorite and previously unbeaten Baby Hold On.

The win earned owners Vaughn and Mary Watkins of Madison, Miss. $166,333.

At Toronto's Woodbine Park, it was a perfect weekend for Jack Stafford of King, Ont.

First, Allan Blue, one of the favorites to win the Queen's Plate on June 28, won the Toronto Cup Handicap at Woodbine Racetrack on Saturday.

Then on Sunday, Stafford's Great State won the 46th running of the $28,450 Connaught Cup Handicap.

With substitute rider Jimmy Fazio aboard, Great State assumed command of the 1 1-16-mile turf race at the outet and was never collared.

At the finish line, Great State was five lengths ahead of runner-up Neara Round. Speedy Lad, a 45-1 outsider, finished third.

Allan Blue reaffirmed his position as the horse to beat in this year's 121st running of the Queen's Plate with an impressive victory in the Toronto Cup Handicap.

Ridden by Joey Belowus, Allan Blue beat Angry Count by two lengths over the 1 1-16-mile turf test.

At Inglewood, Calif., First Albert, a 16-1 longshot, held off fast-finishing Big Doug to win the $113,800 Cinema Handicap by a head before a crowd of 43,048 on Sunday.

Brentwood girls capture rowing event

ST. CATHARINES — Girls from Brentwood College in Mill Bay won the lightweight fours event Saturday in the 35th annual Canadian high school rowing championships at nearby Henley.

Brentwood's Julia Shenck, Ruth Buchanan, Eliza Massey, Bonnie Robinson and cox Karen Middleton defeated Notre Dame of Ontario by three boatlengths in the final after placing first in their preliminary heat.

On Sunday, Ridley College of St. Catharines once again proved the class of the field by winning the premiere event, the boys' varsity eights.

But West Park Secondary School of St. Catharines took the over-all crown after winning three more races Sunday and capturing both the boys' and girls' team titles.

Nanaimo wins junior track title

Up-Island athletes stood front and centre in the annual Vancouver Island junior high school track and field championships Saturday at Claremont.

Nanaimo Wellington, sparked by domination in the midget division, captured the overall team championshipship by finishing 28 points ahead of Arbutus, 119-91.

In addition, up-Island performers figured in four of the nine records broken.

Wellington swept both girls and boys honors in the midget division while Cedar Hill topped the junior girls events and Arbutus won the junior boys title.

U-Island record-breakers were Pat Peterman of Wellington (3.17 metres in the midget pole vault), Karen McCarter of Courtenay (11.9 seconds in the junior 80-metre hurdles), Theresa McPhee of Nanaimo John Barsby (32.08 metres in midget javelin) and Troy Nicklin of Mount Klitska (13.61 metres in the midget shot put).

South Island record-setters were Don Ball of Arbutus (3.58 metres in the junior pole vault), Linda Martin of North Saanich (5.08 metres in the midget long jump), Paul Harris of Stelly's (5.56 metres in the midget long jump), Ken Wilmhurst (2:05.8 in the midget 800) and the Cedar Hill 4x400 junior girls' relay team (4:14.9).

Among other individual standouts was Pat Wellman of Cedar Hill, who won three events — the junior girls 1,500, 800 and high jump.

Yarborough captures 400

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Cale Yarborough outduelled Darrell Waltrip in the early going Sunday and later held off a challenge from Dale Earnhart to win the NASCAR 400 at Texas World Speedway.

Yarborough, who earned the pole position with a qualifying speed of 170.709 miles an hour, kept his Chevrolet running cool, while other drivers dropped behind with overheating problems in the 33-degree weather.

Bobby Allison, driving a Ford, finished third, Waltrip was fourth and rookie Terry Labonte was fifth.

OPEN HOUSE
SUBSTATION AND TRANSMISSION LINE INFORMATION
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1980 IN CENTRAL SAANICH
Proposed Substation Site and Transmission Line Route Location in the Saanich Peninsula Area

B.C. Hydro will hold an "open house" in Central Saanich for public information and discussion concerning a proposed Keating substation and a Pike Lake to Keating to Sidney area transmission line.

The expansion of Hydro facilities is necessary to serve growing electrical loads on the Saanich Peninsula. Transmission lines from Pike Lake to a new substation in the Keating Cross Road area will be needed by 1983. Additional transmission lines to the Sidney area will be required in the late 1980's or early 1990's.

The area plan shown indicates the approximate location of feasible alternatives for which public input is invited.

Additional data and more detailed mapping, as well as a brief report for public distribution, will be available at the open house meeting. Detailed maps can be viewed and the report can be obtained in the municipal halls of Saanich, North Saanich, Central Saanich, the Capital Region District Office in Victoria and B.C. Hydro's regional office at 4400 W. Saanich Road, Victoria, B.C. any time after May 26, 1980.

Merchants grab lead

Victoria Merchants swept three games at the weekend to take over sole possession of first place with a 12-5-1 record in the Pacific Junior Baseball League.

But it was far from easy.

Merchants went 16 innings before edging Burnaby Brentwood Glass 3-2 in the opener Sunday at Topaz Park and then won the second game by default after Burnaby manager Brian Windjack pulled his team from the field in the fourth inning.

On Saturday, Merchants dropped Richmond Akai 9-5 in nine innings at Lambrick Park.

Paul Hrach earned the first pitching win over Burnaby in a duel with Terry Nestegard. Each team only managed three hits during the first 10 innings.

The winning run came in the bottom of the 16th. Nestegard sent Victoria catcher Mike Bull to first with a base-on-balls and was relieved by Mike Joel, who then proceeded to walk Adrian Holland and Ed Geric. Bull scored the tying run on a wild pitch and centre-fielder Dale Schmidt eventually singled in Geric for the winner.

Windjack, who had been also ejected from the first game, was tossed out in the second and decided to take his team with him while Victoria was enjoying a 10-1 advantage. Winning pitcher Dean Potter was working on a two-hitter at the time and the win will stand as a 9-0 decision.

On Saturday, Merchants scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to collect the victory.

Hyacks dominate Island swim meet

Top swimmers on Vancouver Island found out just how tough the opposition from elsewhere can be on the weekend when the Island Open long course championships were held for the first time at Victoria's Crystal Pool.

Island championship meets are usually restricted to Island swimmers but this time top-flight teams came from Canadian Dolphins and Hyack Swim Club of Vancouver, Richmond Aquanauts, West Vancouver Otters, Vancouver Pacific Swim Club and even from the Cranbrook Swim Club.

The powerful Hyack club dominated the three-day meet and swam away with the over-all team title.

But the Island swimmers weren't completely swamped and, in fact, won 14 of the open events, including four victories by Cheryl Grant of Victoria Olympians in the senior class.

Cheryl won the senior girls' 800-metre freestyle, 200-metre backstroke, 100-metre butterfly and the 200 individual medley.

Competing in very tough senior boys events, Stan Davis of the Olympians won the 100 freestyle.

In 15-17-year-old boys' events, Bill Winram of the Olympians won both the 100 and 200 breastroke and clubmate Wayne Kelly took the 400-metre freestyle.

There were three Island winners in the 13-14-year-old class — Connie Shulze of the Olympians, who took the girls' 100 breastroke, and Wayne Bonsdorf of the Olympians, who won both the 100 and 200 breastroke for boys, and Jon Kelly, who was first in the 200-metre butterfly.

Juan de Fuca Coho Swim Club had a double winner in the boys' 11 to 12-year-old division where Rob Dyke swam away with both the 400-metre and 1,500-metre freestyle races.

Island swimmers also captured 27 silver and 30 bronze awards.

Seasprays in a sweep

Seaspray collected three victories in three exhibition lacrosse games at the weekend.

In bantam action, Seasprays topped Richmond 11-5 Sunday in Panorama Leisure Centre after edging the same team 13-10 Saturday on the Mainland.

Gary Gait led the Sunday win with three goals and one assist. Ravi Dhillon scored four goals and assisted on two to lead the Saturday triumph while Rob Norton added three-and-one.

In a peewee game Sunday, Seasprays topped Richmond 17-3 at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Tom Marechek scored six goals and seven assists to lead the way while Clayton MacGregor added four-and-three.

Phillips tops Nanaimo main

Pat Phillips posted the fastest qualifying time (19.05 seconds) and went on to defeat fellow-Victorian Bud Hobbs in the main event of the opening stock-car racing program at Nanaimo's Grandview Bowl Sunday.

A slick track created by wet weather forced cancellation of the Saturday jalopy and stock-car racing program at Western Speedway.

Skip Hogarth, who finished third in the main event, won Sunday's trophy dash at Nanaimo with Hobbs and Phillips taking second and third places, respectively.

Dave Smith of Victoria was the winner of the demolition derby Sunday.

Jones staggers home a winner

MADRID (AP) — Australian Alan Jones nursed an ailing Williams to victory Sunday in the controversial Spanish Grand Prix after accidents eliminated his opposition.

Only three of the 22 starters in the Formula One event completed the 80 laps of the Jarama circuit and only three others were running.

Jones finished more than 50 seconds ahead of West German Jochen Mass in an Arrows, with Italy's Elio de Angelis about 21 seconds farther back in a Lotus.

Ferrari, with drivers Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Que., and Jody Scheckter of South Africa, Renault and Alfa Romeo did not participate in the race, slated to have been the seventh round of 15 races for the 1980 world championship. The three teams said they would not risk competing in an unsanctioned event.

The International Auto Sports Federation (FISA) said the race was not sanctioned and many drivers were running while their licences were suspended.

JETS LAND TWO

Lazy Dazy diaper stacker

By KATHY FARYON

New baby coming? Made a quilt? Have some scraps left over? Why not turn them into petals for this Lazy Dazy Diaper Stacker.

Dazy is whipped up in a jiffy, hangs on the wall near baby's changing table, and keeps diapers neat and tidy within arm's reach. Her happy smile will brighten baby's outlook, and the bright colors in the petals will be fun to point to when baby is being taught colours.

Make Dazy's face a bright yellow or golden orange and use embroidery stitches, (or the liquid variety) to make the eye lashes, nose and smiling mouth. Use Thermolam (polyester fleece which is felt-like) to line the petals and make them stand out crisply. Stuff Dazy's face after backing the fabric with Thermolam, and she will be round and plump. Attach the stacker, apply a loop for hanging, and you're all finished.

Lazy Dazy is a quickie project if you need a baby shower gift. She can hang prettily in the bedroom, bathroom, even in a tent trailer or camper. To move along, simly take off the wall, fold and pack. Any Mum or Dad will welcome this happy addition to their nursery.

Happenings: The National Quilting Association Quilt Show will be held, for the eleventh time, at the Homestead H.S., Ft. Wayne, Indiana from July 12th through July 20th. Three categories are listed: Antique (prior to 1920), Nostalgia (1920-1960), and Regular (since 1960). Classes are: Pieced, Applique, Embroidered, Mixed Techniques, Novelty quilts (e.g. Cathedral window, Yo-Yo, Puff, Crazy quilt, Tied), Whole cloth quilt, Pillows, Wall hangings, Banners and Pictures, Bicentennial (any medium technique/method U.S.A. 1976-1981), and Clothing — hand quilted, machine quilted, pieced and/or appliqued that is unquilted. These classifications are interesting in that in the past there has been general unhappiness with the results of competitions because the categories or classes were not clearly defined and many felt their work was not being judged fairly in competition with their skill level, age level, or individuals versus groups. The following classifications will prove interesting to those who are in the process of organizing shows: A) Professional — Any person accepting a fee or honorarium on a continuing basis: teachers, judges, designers, demonstrators, shop owners, stitchers, quilt pattern/model makers, lecturers of/on quilting, advisors, consultants. B) Amateur — any piece finished prior to becoming a professional must be considered the work of a professional. One cannot return to amateur status. C) Senior Citizen — when work completed, must be over 65 years of age. D) Group project — any top or block(s) made by a person and quilted by the same person is an individual project. A top or block(s) completed by one person and quilted by another person(s) is automatically a group project. If children or teen-age project, would be judged separately from above. E) Children under 13. F) Teens 13-18.

Patterns available: No. HC-1118: Lazy Dazy Diaper Stacker. Complete instructions, $2.20.

How to order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or m.o. to: Hearthside Patterns, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Stn. E., Edmonton, AB T5P 4K2.

Swift action necessary on pensions

Back when I and my readers were young — but old enough to listen to insurance salesmen and Canadian Annuities people urging us to plan for retirement years — financing post-work living was considered a personal responsibility.

This was before workers labored all through January, February, March, April and into May to pay various taxes. Younger readers may find it hard to believe that Income Tax was a temporary Great War measure because a man's earnings were considered untouchable in normal times.

Today it is judged quite routine for citizens of all ages to receive regular payments from government coffers — be it baby bonus, unemployment insurance or old age security. But fears now are frequently expressed as to whether taxpayers can continue to shoulder the growing burden of various kinds of assistance — especially that provided to a rapidly aging population. It is reassuring to report that the Economic Council of Canada (an independent advisory body) does not share such pessimism.

In its recent report (One in Three — Pensions for Canadians) the Council takes a comprehensive look at the economic implications of the Canadian pensions system and how it can be improved. If changes are made to our system of income security for the older citizen, it believes that we can correct current shortcomings and meet future claims without risk to the economy.

But such changes must be made quickly, the Council urges: "Many who will retire in the critical twenty-year period from 2010 to 2030 are already in the work force. If we are going to change our system of income security for the old we will have to announce it well in advance so that people can take those changes into account in planning for retirement."

Reference to decades in the next century may seem far in the future for many of my readers but the Economic Council is thinking of us too.

"The way senior citizens are treated already is a controversial subject," it says. "Many of our elderly citizens are living in socially-unacceptable circumstances. There are pressures to expand services and to improve coverage and benefits of retirement income packages. But with older people forming an increasing proportion of the population, it may be difficult to maintain even existing levels of benefits, let alone expand them, unless we plan well in advance."

The Economic Council believes that Canada has the basis for a remarkably good system for ensuring decent retirement incomes. Its encouraging conclusion is that despite the expected rapid growth in the number of older people who will have a claim on the system — a system to which they contributed — we can meet the challenge.

Now Parliament which set up the Council to help it reach decisions must get on with it.

Toronto has seen several racially-motivated assaults recently, but Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry says there's no racism problem. "Unfortunately, in an large city there's going to be a number of assaults and some of those will be racially motivated," he said.

If God is a woman the United Church of Canada might have trouble accepting it, says lay minister Joanne Sorrill. "Convincing people that God could have a female dimension is going to take a long time," she said at an ecclesiastical conference in Barrie, Ont. Sorrill was booed by men and women delegates.

Prince Philip will arrived in Quebec Sunday to preside over a week-long Commonwealth Conference on industrial society at Laval University. The conference, which began at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., two weeks ago, brings together 300 young business, union and government leaders from 30 Commonwealth countries. Also attending the conference will be Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer and former governor-general Roland Michener.

Bill and Anna Fisher want to fly into orbit together as the first husband-wife astronaut team — and the space agency has given the physicians a chance to do it. Two years ago both applied to be astronauts, but only Dr. Anna Fisher, 30, was picked by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Dr. William Fisher applied again, and last week he was one of 19 new astronaut candidates picked by NASA. "Bill never gave up," Anna said in a telephone interview from the Johnson Space Centre in Houston where she is training. "It's something we've both wanted," Bill, 34, added. "I'm extremely happy."

John Sewell is mayor of Toronto, but his parents still don't think he's old enough to watch a live sex show. Sewell found out his parents were upset after his recent, and highly-publicized, trip to a sex show in Amsterdam. "But what can I do? I just told them I'm 39 years old now," Sewell said. Otherwise, reaction from his constituents has been mostly favorable. "Outside of the parents it's been a marvelous issue," Sewell said. "People love it. I've got people stopping me on the street and jokingly asking me if I've got any dirty pictures to show them."

Dear Abby:

About 20 years ago, in a very distraught emotional state, I wrote to you concerning my involvement with a young woman. I was on the verge of suicide and your advice and support saved my life.

So genuinely concerned were you that you kept me advised as to where to reach you during a Southern tour you were taking at the time.

Much has happened since then, and I want to bring you up-to-date: Recently I wrote a book (my first), titled Night Stalks the Mansion. It became a best-seller. It's now in its ninth printing — approaching the million mark in sales!

Except for your concern and support during a very traumatic time, I would not be alive today, my book would never have been written and my reasonably rewarding life would not have lasted as long as it has (I am 74).

As a result of the book, the above-mentioned lady (no longer young) found me again. She saw me on television and wrote to tell me she had often tried to locate me. She had never married; she has burned a candle for me every year on my birthday!

So, Dear Abby, two lives in which you played a greater part than you know have been greatly enriched by your kindness and counsel.

Harold W. Cameron

Dear Harold:

I remember you well. Thank you for writing. Your letter made my day, my month, my year!

Dear Abby:

I was told that you once had a letter from a grown man who wanted to sue his parents for having had him circumcised when he was an infant. He claimed that he was maimed and permanently disfigured for no reason at all, as he wasn't even Jewish. What was your advice and how did it turn out? I am considering the same action.

Curious

Dear Curious:

I told him if he sued and won he could call it "severance pay." He sued and lost.

Dear Abby:

I live with my daughter and her husband. The other night they had another married couple in for bridge, and just as I walked into the room where they were playing, I happened to see the other woman wrapping her bare legs around my son-in-law's legs! I saw him move his legs away, and then she stretched her legs like they were rubber and very determinedly trapped his legs with hers!

I refuse to be in that woman's company again. I never told my daughter why I dislike this woman so much, so she thinks I'm wrong to have such hate for her friend.

Sees Too Much

Dear Sees:

Don't carry tales to your daughter. If the woman stretches things too far, your daughter will become aware of it and resolve the matter.

We voyage to a lost and lonely land

For most of a week in May, Win and I made two in a group of 26 Campbell River Museum officers, volunteer helpers and hangers-on committed to a voyage of discovery. Our chartered ship was the 120-foot motor vessel Kona Winds, which started life as a Navy sub-shaser. Our venue was that magnificent haunted house, the British Columbia upcoast, and our purpose was to visit a number of Kwakiutl villages spotted among the archipelago off north Vancouver Island.

A lot of hard work and planning went into that pay-your-own way adventure. But a morning finally came when we headed out from Port Hardy for a country even less populous than it was 40 years ago.

This decline in population is a matter of cause and effect. With the introduction of large, fast fish-packers to collect catches for transport to a very few centrally-located processing plants, the salmon canneries that once peppered the upcoast had outlived their usefulness.

They closed, robbing the islanders of seasonal work. In consequence, a drain of families from the villages began. This in turn led to education difficulties for the few children remaining. Teachers were reluctant to bury themselves in dying villages. Government offered the remaining residents a hard choice.

They must leave for larger communities, or send their children to residential schools.

Faced with these alternatives, most of the villagers moved out ... some to Alert Bay, others to the Campbell River area. Their dream was that eventually they'd return to their island homes. But they never did, and the houses they quitted stand forlorn above the clamshell beaches.

But on our second day out — shaken down now, and showing a touch of sunburn — we came to a village to which a few families still gallantly clung. This is Hopetown, its Indian name, Megwekstala. Here Mrs. Elsie Williams, matriarch of the little band, had bidden us ashore for a feast in the Kwakiutl style.

To give you the picture, I can't do better than turn to my wife's diary.

"A wonderful, touching scene," Win wrote. "The whole village, maybe 13-15 people, greeted the ship dressed in ceremonial capes, wolf mask, Sonoqua (Wild Woman of the Woods) mask, singing a welcome-song. Mrs. Williams, whose husband died last fall, made a speech. 'Our hearts are happy to welcome you,' she said. 'Our hearts are happy that although we are so small in numbers, you did not pass us by. We have been saddened by the death of my husband, Fred Williams, who was our chief. But by your coming, you have helped us to dry our tears!' "

In strict observance of Kwakiutl procedure, we waited on the ship until a robed greeter accompanied by two little boys wearing hemlock wreaths and anklets came down to the float to bid us land. Then, coached in the formalities by the three Kwakiutl members of our group, we filed along the float string with slow and solemn paces, accompanied by a side-to-side swaying of our hands.

Once on shore, solemnity ended. We were split into work parties: some to dig clams for the feast, women to help decorate ceremonial aprons for gifts at a potlatch Elsie Williams planned, and others to tend an enormous cooking fire.

The wealth of clams under the white beach to which we were taken by small boat was fantastic. Every turn of a spade fetched up fat and succulent butter clams, not as singles but in half-dozen batches.

Our clams went into a big black cauldron atop the fire. While they steamed, Elsie, her mother and her daughter proceeded to make bannocks.

The bannock, staple fare in wild country, is frying-pan bread. The ingredients that go into it are flour, baking powder and water. As each pan was lifted from the ashes of the fire, it surrendered a smoking-hot, golden-brown round that set the mouth watering.

We dined on bannock, clams steamed, and clams barbecued after being impaled on cedar splints. This feast we washed down with clam nectar. Then for dessert we had huckleberries, thimble-berries, salal preserves and sheets of dried and compressed berries from Elsie Williams' bountiful supply.

We wound up with a bout of la-halle, the universal Indian stick game. Then we took our leave. Standing with her people on the grass in front of her house, Elsie watched us depart. The band looked very small and very much alone, up there in the shadow of the forest that crowded toward the village.

Joan Currie leaves premier's office

Rights body reps to come from list

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Mission Accomplished! That, no doubt, was in Joan Currie's mind as she left the Legislative Buildings last Friday, after delivering two large envelopes — one to Premier Bill Bennett and the other to Minister of Labor Jack Heinrich.

In those envelopes were the names and qualifications of eleven women throughout the province who would make excellent members of the British Columbia Human Rights Commission.

They include women in professional life, in business and in voluntary services.

Some are well-known to the public. Others are working quietly and efficietly without benefit of publicity.

Mrs. Currie was given authority to present these names during a 32nd annual provincial conference of business and professional women's clubs of British Columbia and Yukon, on the holiday weekend in Kelowna.

Decision followed unanimous approval of an emergency resolution in which the British Columbia government is urged "to appoint women to the Human Rights Commission so that both sexes are equally represented."

The resolution points out that "approximately half of the present Commissioners will have completed their terms of office in August, 1980, and new appointments will be made."

It then says "and further be it resolved that names of women be submitted with this resolution to the government of British Columbia, by Friday, May 30, 1980."

After completing the undertaking last Friday, Joan Currie told me she was aware Gloria George, a Carrier Indian from Telkwa had been appointed to the Human Rights Commission, as announced by Labor Minister Heinrich a day or so ago.

"A good choice", she says, "but that only gives us two women on the Commission and one is the chairman.

"Several more will need to be appointed before the principles of human rights can be truly implemented."

Here Mrs. Currie pointed out that BPW clubs are not alone in urging more women be appointed to the Commission.

At a conference on human rights for British Columbians, sponsored by the Human Rights Commission, the Department of the Secretary of State and the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, and held in Vancouver last December, a number of resolutions were passed critical of the lack of women as commission members.

Some 245 participants — women and men — representing over 110 community, government and media organizations, attended that conference.

Main objectives, as announced, were to discover the nature and extent of discrimination, to inform the commission about ways of dealing with human rights issues and to explore means of creating conditions which would help to eliminate discrimination.

To achieve this collective interchange, a series of forums and small group seminars were set up and from them 100 recommendations and resolutions were received.

A resolution passed in the small group seminar on women asked that "the Human Rights Comission be comprised only of people experienced in the field of human rights and that 50 per cent of these people be women and that this be accomplished with the 1980 appointments."

Still another from the same seminar suggested the present government of British Columbia and the former minister of labor "be condemned for appointing to the Human Rights Commission people without adequate experience in positive action on human rights."

Also "that the appointment of persons who are publicly known to have opposed implementation of sections of the code is appalling particularly when those persons have subsequently made public comments violating the spirit of the Human Rights Code, or sat silent while remarks were being made."

This same resolution was passed by small group seminars on the media and on sexual orientation.

"I'm not telling you these facts from hearsay or from memory," Joan Currie said.

"You'll find them all set out in the printed report on the full proceedings of that conference."

Returning briefly to the list of names and the resolution she had just delivered, Mrs. Currie said "Its in their court now, we'll have to wait and see what happens.

Postscript — At the conference of business and professional women's clubs of British Columbia and Yukon in Kelowna, 10 resolutions (two in the emergency category) were discussed, in some instances re-worded or amended, and then passed.

As BPW's provincial chairman of resolutions and by-laws, Joan Currie (who heads her own accounting business) will devote her spare hours to preparing a brief encompassing all these resolutions.

When it is ready she will have the reponsibility of arranging to present that brief to Premier Bennett and his cabinet.

Retching: By any name it's common

By DR. BOB YOUNG

Patients call it vomiting, the kids call it barfing, nurses and doctors are likely to refer to it as emesis, and Shakespeare called it puking. Call it what you will, throwing up is a common occurrence. Usually the symptom is shortlived and is handled by the patient or the patient's parents. Sometimes, however, vomiting is more prolonged and severe and requires medical management.

Dangers associated with protracted vomiting include disturbances of fluid and saliva balance in the body, exhaustion, and aspiration of stomach material into the lungs. There are many medical reasons for vomiting and, as ais usual in medicine, the best management is the effective treatment of the underlying problem.

There are two areas in the brain that, when stimulated, cause us to vomit. The emesis centre is triggered by anatomical causes such as irritation of the stomach or intestines, gallstones, and infections such as appendicities. The other centre is called the chemical receptor trigger zone, and it reacts to drugs such as alcohol and narcotics, and to poisons in the bloodstream from ingested toxins or abnormally high levels of body waste products in the blood.

It is thought that the chemical receptor centre senses the presence of the toxic material and sends a signal to the emesis centre which responds by causing the person to vomit.

The doctor is able to choose the best treatment for his vomiting patient if he knows which centre is being stimulated. The emesis centre appears to be best treated by using antihistaminic drugs such as Gravol or Dramamine. Emesis due to drugs or chemicals seems to respond better to drugs called phenothiazines, prescription drugs of which Largactil and Stelazine are examples.

Cancer patients who become ill while on chemotherapy generally do better with phenothiazines, while the patient with motion sickness, a heart attack, Meniere's disease, or an upset stomach should, in theory at least, be treated with an antihistaminic.

Stopping the vomiting does not cure the disease, and specific measures are usually required to do this. The patient will certainly feel better and be less fatigued if his stomach settles down, and will be in better shape to combat the underlying problem.

Info/Health is brought to you by the British Columbia Medical Association and the Victoria Times.

Dr. Young welcomes letters from his readers — sent c/o the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4. Only letters of broadest interest will be referred to and personal replies are not possible.

$50M in pot seized in N.S. raid, 10 held

SHELBURNE, N.S (CP) — Nova Scotia's south shore — a haven for rumrunners during prohibition — was the scene of a seizure of more modern contraband when eight Colombian nationals and an American were arrested Saturday with a boatload of marijuana.

The nine unidentified men, arrested when 20 tonnes of marijuana were seized on the motor vessel The Patricia, were in jail awaiting charges today.

Police said the marijuana, wrapped in large bales and stored below decks, could have a street value of $50 million.

While the drug entered Canada at Shelburne, a police official said most shipments of that size are relayed directly to the larger urban markets in central Canada and the U.S. Little manages to return to the Maritimes.

A combined force of Canadian and United States Coast Guard officers, RCMP and fisheries officers took part in the investigation leading up to the arrests.

Coast guards from both countries had the 20-metre vessel under surveillance for several days as she steamed toward Canadian waters. She entered Canadian territory at about 3 a.m. ADT Saturday.

Police said The Patricia was registered in the former British Honduras, now called Belize.

I'm so thrilled with my Arthur Murray dance lessons.
They taught me exactly what I wanted to learn!
What a discovery! Not to feel strange or alone in a crowd anymore. To dance with someone is to be part of the scene.
I'm sensational! The new terrific me. Dancing is part of my life. It should be part of yours: you'll love yourself for it.
You'll be amazed what two feet can learn about moving a body.

Hotel fire, sniper shake Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP) — A nine-year-old boy and two firemen were killed and an armed man was taken into custody after a 31-hour siege in three separate incidents which kept Saskatoon police and firefighters busy during the weekend.

Robert Arneson was pronounced dead on arrival Friday night at a city hospital from bullet wounds after he was found lying unconscious beside the road near his home with his bicycle nearby.

Saskatoon police Inspector Keith Mackie said a neighbor called police shortly after 10 p.m. local time to report that someone had fired a .22-calibre rifle three or four times at passing vehicles. A second caller reported a child lying unconscious by the roadside in the residential area of the city's north end.

A city youth is scheduled to appear in juvenile court today to face a manslaughter charge in connection with the youngster's death.

On Saturday, firemen Denis Aaron Guenter, 29, and Victor James Budz, 47, died when their luck apparently ran out and they were caught in a backdraft while fighting a fire in the basement of a downtown Saskatoon hotel.

Three other firemen caught by what Fire Chief Chuck Sebestyen described as "a tremendous smoke and heat explosion" managed to grope their way to safety. Fireman Wes Poole was taken to hospital, suffering from exhaustion, smoke inhalation and shock. Capt. Les Parker and Lieut. Walter Rardy escaped serious injury.

Sebestyen told a news conference Sunday that poor ventilation in the basement of the Queen's Hotel, which was to be closed Saturday for renovations, created the conditions that caused the backdraft.

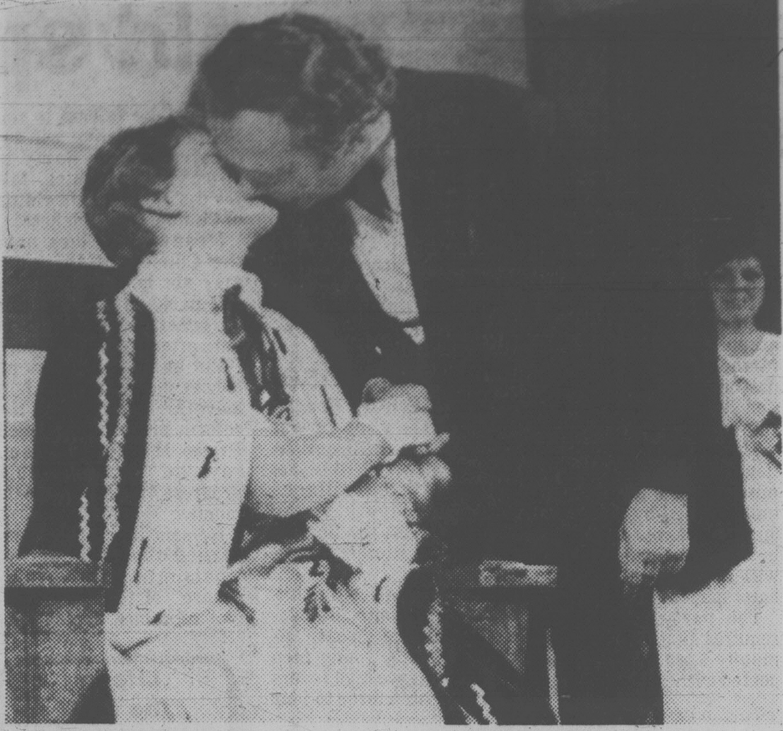
Sebestyen said it was the first time the Saskatoon department had lost anyone while fighting a fire.

Also on Saturday, a man armed with what police said was a high-powered rifle barricaded himself in a house following a domestic quarrel.

The siege ended Sunday morning after the man surrendered to police who had pounded on the walls of the house and negotiated with him by field telephone.

No shots were fired throughout the incident.

A city police spokesman said charges have not been laid against the 41-year-old man who was placed in protective custody in a hospital's psychiatric ward.



FEELING BETTER after his recent stay in hospital, Governor-General Edward Schreyer kisses 20-year-old Gilean Alcoe after he crowned her 48th queen of the Annapolis Valley Blossom Festival. The governor-general and his wife Lily are on a four-day tour of Nova Scotia.

Armed forces symbol of unity, says Philip

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Prince Philip says Canada's armed forces are a unifying symbol Canadians need.

The prince, visited London, Hamilton and Halifax on the weekend.

On Saturday he presented his personal banner to the Royal Canadian Regiment's Duke of Edinburgh Company. The prince is the regiment's colonel-in-chief.

He told the company the armed forces are a means for all Canadians to express comradeship and pride in their country.

He said he was pleased the company had been named in his honor.

Later he flew to Quebec City where he will attend the Fifth Commonwealth Study Conference at Laval University.

Tories to hold spring convention

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party will hold a national convention in Ottawa next February, party president Robert Coates announced Saturday.

Coates said after a morning session of the party's national executive committee that the 30-member group, in choosing a time for the annual meeting, had passed unanimously a motion supporting the leadership of Joe Clark.

The timing of the convention represents a compromise between a fall meeting proposed by Clark and one later next year favored by Coates. Specific dates will be announced after hotel space is booked.

The party constitution requires that the approximately 3,000 delegates expected at the convention be asked by secret ballot if they are satisfied with Clark's leadership.

Coates said that a series of five regional meetings would be held by the party this fall.

He said both he and Clark believe the party is in good health. "I think that the regional meetings that we have in the fall up to the February meeting will indicate that the party is strong," said Coates, MP for the Nova Scotia riding of Cumberland-Colchester.

Meanwhile, Clark said the Conservative party may not be ready with a full package of proposals on constitutional reform until after the convention.

But he told reporters he is not concerned this might leave his party out of the reform process, for which Prime Minister Trudeau says he wants "visible progress" within six to 10 months.

He said he is more concerned that Trudeau is "poisoning the atmosphere" of federal-provincial relations, hoping that talks will fail and allow him to seek support for his own proposals in a national referendum.

Trudeau is to meet Clark and NDP leader Ed Broadbent Wednesday to attempt to see if there is enough common ground in their positions on constitutional reform to allow them to be part of the federal delegation at future constitutional conferences.

Clark, however, did not seem optimistic, saying Trudeau seemed to be narrowing the range of constitutional issues he considered to be negotiable. He planned to make that clear to Trudeau at the Wednesday meeting.

"I certainly am not going to go to a federal-provincial conference to defend a federal position that I have not helped formulate," he said.

Clark said aggressive remarks by Trudeau and his ministers against the provinces seemed to be aimed at scuttling talks set to begin June 9.

"I'm fearful they are trying to set up the constitutional conference for a fall, trying to guarantee that it will fail," Clark said.

MacEachen off to Paris

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance minister Allan MacEachen begins a four-day, high-level visit to Paris today with the effects of inflation and the U.S. recession on Canada and other economies as major topics of concern.

MacEachen combines bilateral talks with French government ministers with a two-day annual ministerial meeting of the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

Killer disease

CHITTAGONG, Bangladesh (AP) — A mysterious disease has claimed at least 70 lives in the last week in three villages along the mouth of the Ganges River, the Bengali newspaper Ittefaq reported.

A medical officer in Chittagong, in south Bangladesh, said the disease attacked mostly young men who experience high fevers and die within three to four hours.

Announcing the "Beautiful Forests" photo competition. For amateurs, young and old.

Take a beautiful photo of the forest—an attractive scene, wildlife, hikers or whatever—and you could win an expenses-paid trip for two. Details below.

The pulp and paper industry of Canada is sponsoring this competition to remind us just how important the forests are to our Canadian way of life.

The forest industry creates one job in every ten. Exports of pulp and paper bring in about $1,000 a year per family. Our forests and woodlands are a haven for wildlife, outdoor enthusiasts and all who appreciate nature's beauty.

Send in your best colour photograph—slide, print or instant photo—and you could win an all-expense-paid trip for two.

What should you photograph? Winners will be chosen for their ability to capture the beauty and drama of the forest. Show a single bud opening in spring or the panorama of a thousand acres. Add people or wildlife if you wish.

Three age categories, three sets of winners

Your entry will go into one of three categories: adults (18 years of age and over), youngsters (13 to 17), and children (12 and under).

Win a trip to the city of your choice

The first prize winner in each category will receive an all-expenses-paid trip for two to the city of choice: Vancouver, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec City, Halifax, Fredericton or St. John's. Included in the prize is return air fare, six nights hotel accommodation and $500 in cash.

Since entrants obviously have an interest in the care and management of our forest resources, the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association will arrange for winners to visit a mill and reforestation area in the vicinity.

600 other prizes. Lots of chances to win.

Even if you don't win a trip, you can still earn recognition for your photographic skills. Two hundred runners-up in each category will receive poster-size reproductions of their entries.

Just be sure your entry is a colour photo—and carefully packaged for protection in transit. Enclose the completed entry form and mail before midnight, September 15, 1980.

The final selection of winners will be made by three of Canada's leading artists and photographers.

Winners will be notified on or about November 15, 1980.

Tips to help you take beautiful photos.

As part of Canada's largest manufacturing industry, our forests stretch from British Columbia to Newfoundland. Pockets of lush growth are in every corner—including the very heart of our largest cities.

Many of the companies in Canada invite the public to picnic and stroll their nature trails. So go exploring, but look for the unusual. Sunrise, rain showers, mist, wildlife and people are just a few of the ways to add unusual drama and beauty to your photos.

And while you're visiting and photographing our forests, take a few minutes to appreciate both their grandeur and immense contribution to Canadian life.

THE PRIZES

1. This contest is open to all residents of Canada other than people who earn any part of their income through photography, CPPA employees or their families, its advertising agency personnel or their families.

Three S. African refineries bombed as unrest mounts

SASOLBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Suspected black nationalist guerrillas set off satchel bombs at three strategic government refineries, igniting an inferno that sent flames leaping 3,000 feet into the sky at the two facilities in Sasolburg.

"It was like watching a nuclear bomb going off in the movies," said Hennie van Rensburg, who was walking home from a late shift when the bombs exploded at the Sasol synthetic fuel plant and an adjoining conventional refinery just before midnight.

"I nearly passed out," he said.

Another synthetic fuel project, which converts coal into oil, in Secunda, 185 miles northeast of Sasolburg, also was rocked by explosives. But a fire there was quickly contained and damage was limited.

The simultaneous midnight raids on the three facilities, which coincided with mounting racial unrest in the country, were the most serious in 20 years of sabotage by black guerrillas seeking to overthrow South Africa's white minority government.

A guard at the Sasol facility, where South Africa pioneered oil-from-coal production, was wounded when he stumbled upon guerrillas planting charges and they opened fire on him with a Soviet-designed AK-47 automatic rifle.

Firefighters were brought in from around the region to battle the fires involving seven giant storage tanks at the two Sasolburg refineries. Officials said the blaze was the worst in the nation's history.

Flames, which could be seen 15 miles away, leaped 3,000 feet into the sky during the height of the blaze. Heat from the fire could be felt up to two miles away.

Residents said they heard a series of small explosions just before midnight, then about 10 minutes later their houses were suddenly walloped with a series of thunderous blasts.

Smoke drifted into Johannesburg 35 miles away and flames were still soaring 300 feet into the air when officials declared the fires under control 10 hours later.

Sasol spokesman Anton Roodt said an estimated $5.5 million worth of fuel was lost in the blaze.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	3◇	3♡
4♠	Pass	5♡	6♣
Pass	6♡	Dble	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead — four of clubs.

This deal occurred during the 1958 European championship in the match between Italy and France. When the Italian team held the North-South cards at the first table, they got to four spades and made five for a score of 650 points. But when France was North-South at the second table, the bidding went as shown and the Italian East-West pair got to six hearts doubled and went down four — 1,100 points.

Commenting on North's double of six hearts, one well-known analyst said that North's decision was excellent, since six spades could not be made against proper defense.

However, this analysis was faulty. South can make six spades, even though West leads a heart and the diamonds are divided unfavorably. After declarer wins the heart lead with the ace he plays five rounds of trumps, producing this position:

Declarer now leads the six of spades, West and dummy each discarding a club as East parts with a heart.

Next comes the deuce of spades and West, who cannot spare either a diamond or a club, is compelled to discard the queen of hearts. Declarer should now have no trouble reading the actual situation. He discards a diamond from dummy, leads a club towards dummy's K-10, and thus brings home the slam.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Bobby was playing on the rug. "I've got three times as many reds as greens," he declared. "Look."

"All greens, blues and reds," Uncle Ted replied. "A lot of marbles, but how many exactly?"

The boy smiled. "Either more greens than blues, and I've got one blue for every five reds."

How many in all?

Mayor willing to share chair

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier today agreed with a suggestion by Ald. Irene Block that council members share the task of chairing the standing committee.

"The same thought had crossed my mind," said Couvelier, adding that at times he feels inhibited in the chair.

However, Couvelier said he doesn't think a rotating chairmanship is a good idea until the seating arrangement has been changed.

"It would be mickey mouse to move around like it's musical chairs," he said.

Municipal staff has been ordered to study ways the furniture could be rearranged to relax the atmosphere.

The object is to try to get council members closer to the audience and closer to each other, Couvelier said.

"I think the remoteness of aldermen from each other contributes to the disunity.

"They can't poke and shove and make asides to each other," he said.

Teacher retraining appointment

One of the first appointments in the B.C. school system directed toward retraining teachers at the district level has been made by Victoria.

He is Dr. Robin C. Brayne, 34, who will join Greater Victoria District 61 in August as director of instruction for staff development.

He is now co-ordinator of curriculum and staff development for North Vancouver School District.

He expects to play a significant part in the redirection of teachers because of the decrease in secondary school enrolment. Teachers from that level will be expected to become qualified for teaching at the elementary level where pupil enrolments are rising.

He will also be responsible for professional development in which all teachers may learn new skills and programs.

"We are getting more research on how children learn and methods of teaching them," Brayne said.

Time for begonias

gardening
hilda beastall

By now, it should be safe to advise the planting out of both the tuberous begonias and the bedding zonal geraniums. Last week several cool early mornings followed by strong winds delayed the idea, for these two summer ornamental plants are easily harmed by cold spring weather.

The reason is that we like to start them into growth before planting outdoors and the young leaves are not accustomed to temperatures between 2 and 10 degrees after being indoors or in the greenhouse.

In fall, as the summer growth is gradually hardened by outdoor living and with the gradual lowering of temperatures, both the begonias and the geraniums often continue flowering until Christmas in sheltered gardens.

Tuberous begonias are most satisfying for shady spots where the soil is good and dappled light reaches occasionally. The globular double flowers of brilliant hues bring life to the dark greens around them.

When planting, be sure of the following points. Provide a loose soil with lots of humus from compost soil, leafmould and a little well soaked peatmoss if short of leafmould. Don't bury the tuberous rootstock too deeply and don't apply fertilizer at this time.

Another point is to allow space for foliage expansion without touching from one plant to the next: Air space between plants and all around the foliage when full grown must be assured. Mildew is caused by several allied conditions. One is allowing roots to become quite dry and then watering heavily on a cool day or evening, or a heavy rain does the same trick.

In fact, watering for begonias in this climate of cool nights must be done before noon at the latest. In climates of hot nights, spraying with water in evenings is considered a benefit, but not here.

In fact, no watering in gardens of mixed plantings should be done here in evenings.

Zonal geraniums are plants for hot and rather dry spots. Planters and tubs in full sun will flower all summer and fall if these old favorites are put in.

Use humusy soil in each planting hole to aid new roots to make progress, but again, no fertilizer at this time. Wait until flowering has begun and roots are active then give one weak feeding in solution; during July is a good time.

Although liking hot sunshine, the zonal geraniums will take a couple of hours of shade. And they need water when the soil at the roots begins to be dry.

The tuberous begonias and the geraniums need their fading flowers removed promptly to encourage the continuation of blooming. With these attentions, the sunny spots and shady nooks in the garden will be alive with color for several months.

SPLASHDOWN: Six members of the Pacific Fleet diving team from CFB Esquimalt touch the finish line in Victoria's Inner Harbor Saturday after swimming a relay across the Strait of Georgia from Vancouver. Swimmers (top to bottom) Lt. Paul Marson, CPO Albert Wood, PO Daryl Skaalrud, LS George Cox, M/S Dennis Shaw and AS Scott Schooner, wore wet suits without snorkels or tanks and covered the 109 kilometres in 60 hours, 20 less than they expected it would take. Capt. Robin Alford described conditions as calm with no tidal rips. Accompanied by a diving tender, the swimmers left HMCS Discovery in Stanley Park Thursday afternoon and took one-hour shifts in the water. They had collected pledges for each kilometre with proceeds going to the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children.

More refugees leaving Cuba

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — Under Cuban orders to leave port, a fishing boat radioed today it was leading 50 to 60 boats packed with refugees from the port of Mariel in a dramatic final exodus of the freedom sealift.

The exodus, which includes the Panamanian registered Red Diamond with as many as 2,000 refugees aboard, could push the refugee total since the sealift began April 21 to over 100,000. The Cuban government Sunday ordered all sealift boats to leave within 24 hours.

"The fishing vessel Carolina communicated with the (cutter) Cherokee," Coast Guard spokesman Bob Schenck said in Miami. "It said approximately 50 to 60 vessels were departing Mariel and it was in the lead.

"It said the motor vessel Red Diamond was immediately behind it with 1,500 to 2,000 people aboard," he said. The Cherokee rendezvoused with the Red Diamond at mid-morning 25 miles north of Mariel.

Only three boats and a handful of refugees had arrived today and Sunday after 42 days of the sealift in which almost 95,000 Cubans have been ferried across the Florida Straits to Key West.

The crew of one of those boats said early today Cuban authorities had ordered all American boats remaining at Mariel to leave within 24 hours.

"At around 10 this morning (Sunday), they came up to us and said 'Prepare yourself, you have to leave within one hour.' They did this to three other boats and we all left together," said Luis Hernandez, a crewman aboard the shrimp boat Admiral Backman, which arrived with 233 refugees aboard.

In Fort Chaffee, Ark. today, there was no sign of unrest after an uprising Sunday by Cuban refugees who set fire to buildings and battled soldiers and police at their relocation center.

A military official at the center said about 1,000 Cubans stormed the main gate Sunday and an estimated 350 began throwing sticks and bottles.

About 300 soldiers from Fort Sill, Okla., were sent to the relocaton center and more were to be dispatched within a few days.

Four refugees suffered injuries that required hospitalization and one was in serious condition from a gunshot wound. Army, hospital and mortuary spokesmen denied rumors two Cubans had been killed. Refugees considered to be the ringleaders of the rioting were put in the camp stockade.

Presidential aide Gene Eidenberg arrived early today and said the federal government now realizes it must use whatever non-lethal force is necessary to keep the refugees under control and on the base grounds.

Some 2,000 Fort Smith and Barling residents, some armed with rifles and clubs, gathered outside the base during the rioting and demanded to be let in "to bash heads." Police said six people were arrested for disorderly conduct.

Refugees flee isle

VILA, New Hebrides (Reuter) — Nearly 1,000 refugees have been evacuated peacefully from the rebel-held New Hebrides island of Espiritu Santo.

About 800 plantation workers armed with bows and arrows seized government buildings on the island last Wednesday. They were supported by 50 French-speaking Europeans with rifles and shotguns.

The rebels are demanding autonomy for Espiritu Santo when New Hebrides, ruled jointly by Britain and France, becomes independent on July 30.

Informed sources on the French Pacific island of New Caledonia said a platoon of French paramilitary police had been placed on alert for possible intervention in the New Hebrides.

New Caledonia has no plans to evacuate French nationals from Espiritu Santo, but 50 tourists from New Caledonia were expected to be evacuated by sea.

In today's evacuation four boats ferried the refugees, who included Britons, New Zealanders and Australians, to the island of Malekula, 32 kilometres to the south. From there they were transferred to the capital, Vila, on the island of Efate.

Eight small vessels, including the British resident commissioner's launch, inter-island traders and sailing yachts, were used in the rescue operation.

The government, headed by chief minister and Prime Minister-Elect Walter Lini, was waiting for a reply from Britain and France to his request for assistance in quelling the rebellion.

Gandhi wins in roughie

NEW DELHI (UPI) — In an election called the most violent in the nation's history, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today won sweeping electoral victories in four states and unbeatable leads in three of the four other contested states.

Results in the state elections were a strong endorsement of Mrs. Gandhi's return to power, but the victory was soured by violence in which 60 people were killed, including eight candidates.

Mrs. Gandhi's candidates won two-thirds majorities in Gujarat, Rajasthan and Orissa.

Iran caper labelled 'disgrace'

TEHRAN (CP) — Toronto lawyer Michael Smith said today Canada's decision to help six U.S. diplomats escape Iran in January was a "disgrace."

Smith is one of three Canadians attending an international conference on the alleged crimes of the U.S. in Iran.

"I think it is a disgrace that our ambassador collaborates with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency to remove some of the embassy staff from Iran," he said in an interview.

The two other Canadians attending the conference are Ellen Lipsius of Toronto and Claire Demers of Montreal. More than 50 countries are represented at the conference.

Former U.S. attorney-general Ramsey Clark said in an interview he believes the recent American raid was "lawless and contrary to constitutional government." He said he hopes American participation in the conference will help resolve the hostage issue.

Clark is a member of the 10-member U.S. delegation which was warned before leaving the U.S. that it might face jail terms of up to 10 years and fines of up to $50,000 for travelling to Iran. Members seemed unconcerned about the travel ban, imposed by President Carter in May.

The Soviet delegation, said his group does not approve of hostage-taking as a way of solving the Iranian-American problem but the U.S. has not done what it could to resolve the dispute with Iran.

In Washington, President Carter, sounding a renewed warning to Iran, said Sunday the United States will take "very severe" steps if the hostages are put on trial or abused, and no form of retaliation has been ruled out.

Carter declined to indicate what steps he had in mind, but made clear the U.S. reaction will be harsh if spy trials are held for any of the 53 American captives in Iran since Nov. 4.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said a United Nations commission examining the dispute between Iran and the U.S. will not be allowed to visit the American hostages.

Ghotbzadeh's statement appears to raise a serious obstacle to resumption of the commission's work which was suspended in March when group members were not permitted to see the hostages.

The foreign minister told reporters that the original purpose of the proposed visit to the hostages was to see whether the captives "are alive and safe and their condition of living is acceptable."

Ghhotbzadeh said he now is pressing the commission to present its report on the alleged crimes of the ex-shah and the U.S. without visiting the hostages.

Burn victim now 'stable'

Alfred J. Keddy, 66, is now in stable condition after suffering burns and smoke inhalation in a $65,000 fire at his apartment building Saturday morning.

Keddy was pulled from smoke-filled suite 308 at 908 Market by his son Alfred, who was awakened by the fire and turned in the alarm.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson said a cigarette appeared to be the cause of the fire which started in a large upholstered chair in Keddy's apartment.

Flames or smoke spread to eight other suites on each floor of the four-storey building, causing direct damage or resulting in water damage such as collapsed ceilings.

Structural damage was estimated at $30,000 and losses to contents about $35,000.

Nielsen ready to review crematorium decision

Saanich and Victoria have a commitment from Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen for another hearing on the contentious Hatley Gardens crematorium project in Colwood.

Roy Wootten, chairman of the board of trustees of Royal Oak cemetery, which is owned by the two municipalities, said the board's lawyer has received a letter from the minister stating he would listen again to Saanich and Victoria.

They oppose the crematorium because they claim that Royal Oak's non-profit facility has the capacity to handle all cremations on southern Vancouver Island and a commercial crematorium is not needed.

Saanich and Victoria recently filed a petition in B.C. Supreme Court alleging that Nielsen acted in bad faith by approving the project early this year, after first refusing a certificate to Hatley Memorial Gardens Ltd. on its first application in 1979.

Wootten said no date has been set for the meeting with the minister.

The two municipalities have jointly owned Royal cemetery since the 1920s and have operated a crematorium there since 1937.

Bootleg bus service loses licence bid

The B.C. Motor Carrier Commission has confirmed its Jan. 10 decision to refuse to give Convair Coach Lines a licence to run a bus service from Victoria to Vancouver International Airport.

The original decision was handed down after a November, 1979, hearing in which Convair sought the licence that would have legitimized the bootleg service it was offering.

Convair's licence allowed it to carry passengers booked through five city travel agents, but it was revealed later that Convair itself was selling tickets directly to the public.

Another city firm, Hustle Bus Ltd., had originally bought the licence to operate a service to Victoria and Vancouver airports from the provincial government, which first ran the service.

The company didn't initiate its Vancouver run until after the commission ordered Convair to stop its illegal operation.

The commission's order sparked a rash of protests from the public and various politicians at all levels.

Deductions indexing to be axed: paper

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government is considering removing the inflation-indexing provisions in its personal income tax system which it says now is saving Canadian taxpayers $1.4 billion this year, according to The Globe and Mail.

In an Ottawa dispatch, the newspaper says the move would be aimed at reducing the federal deficit which came under study in the Senate committee on national finance last week. Ian Stewart, deputy minister of finance, told the committee the whole range of tax incentives offered by Ottawa would come under major study.

The indexing provisions have been in effect since 1974, providing automatic adjustments to personal deductions based on the inflation rate.

U-moratorium too long

KELOWNA (CP) — A "hasty and unwise" seven-year moratorium on uranium mining and exploration in British Columbia should be replaced by a two-year ban which can be extended if necessary, says a resolution adopted Sunday by the B.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Approval of the motion at the chamber's annual meeting was coupled with an attack on the impartiality of David Bates, chairman of the government's inquiry into uranium mining, by the delegate who proposed the resolution.

Sherwin Kelly of Merritt said since he had joined the chamber's mining committee he had "learned that the Bates commission is heavily biased and the chairman himself is heavily biased against the industry."

Kelly amended his own resolution to suggest the appointment of a "balanced, qualified and non-partisan commission" which could make annual fact-finding public reports on uranium mining and exploration without submitting recommendations to the government. The amendment was approved.

The chamber resolution says a flexible program should be substituted for the present "rigid dictum." The two-year moratorium should be extended a maximum of four more years, it says, during which time an evaluation should be made of the industry.

On Saturday, the group adopted a policy statement on mining which termed the moratorium an extreme example of actions which seriously undermine confidence of investors in B.C.'s mining industry.

Another motion called for consideration of a nuclear power plant for Vancouver Island, despite the moratorium and government statements that nuclear energy is not needed in B.C. for the present.

In other business, the meeting called for immediate in-depth studies of the proposed Aluminum Co. of Canada hydroelectric power expansion.

Delegates to the annual meeting were told by Chris Hansen of the Prince George chamber, which sponsored the motion, that residents of north-central B.C. who would be affected by the $2.5-billion project want independent studies to safeguard their interests.

Other resolutions included a call for the freezing of B.C. Hydro's electricity rates unless the government-owned utility can fully justify an increase.

Spending responsibility

KELOWNA (CP) — Business must take on some responsibility for ensuring that government spending is kept under control, Ronald Wood, newly-elected president of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, said Sunday.

Wood, a West Vancouver branch manager of the computer division of Honeywell Ltd., said he was pleased chambers of commerce seemed to be developing a more responsible attitude toward government grants and subsidies.

Engineering backed at UVic

The B.C. Chamber of Commerce has voted to support University of Victoria rather than Simon Fraser University as the site for the province's second school of engineering.

Delegates meeting in Kelowna, by a two-to-one margin, passed a resolution presented by Victoria president Cedric Steele calling for the project to be awarded to UVic.

The only engineering school in the province is at the University of B.C.

The provincial government has recognized a need for a second one because of the shortage of engineering graduates.

UVic and SFU have made formal applications for the school.

Chamber manager Brian Small, in a telephone interview from Kelowna, said Saturday delegates were impressed by Victoria's arguments UVic is the university of the B.C. interior as well as Vancouver Island.

UBC and SFU, on the other hand, mainly serve the Lower Mainland, the convention was told.

The resolution asks the Universities Council to support UVic's bid for the program, which would involve a significant expansion for the university.

A second Victoria resolution, calling for opposition to construction of an oil port near Port Angeles, was also passed by the delegates. The vote was almost unanimous.

Airport radar years away

Radar has been approved for Victoria airport but it will be three or four years before it is installed, a ministry of transport official said today.

Ottawa has agreed to the idea in principle but it is part of a package of airport improvements that must be submitted to treasury board for funding.

The MOT has been told the radar will be installed but the timing is indefinite.

Funding approval is expected this fall.

After that, specifications would have to be drawn up and the project would have to go to tender.

It could be be 3 years before the radar is installed and could take as long as 4 years, MoT said.

Counter Attack awards

Two Sidney students are among 34 high school graduates in B.C. who have won awards from the government for their contributions in the fight against drinking driving.

Katherine Dietrich and Johanna Lankenav, members of the graduating class from Parkland secondary school, will each receive $250 for their projects on the CounterAttack theme.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said the province-wide competition was held to promote greater awareness of the drinking driving problem.

"Young drivers are one of CounterAttack's major concerns," Williams said. "They are involved in 40 per cent of all traffic fatalities yet they account for only 20 per cent of the driving population. A disproportionate number of these deaths are alcohol-related."

The top honors, worth $500, went to four students including two from Kelowna, one from Coquitlam and one from Castlegar.

This is the second year the government has held the competition. Last year 33 awards were presented.

City archives closed June

The Victoria civic archives will be closed for most of June to allow summer student staff to index and catalogue the larger document collections.

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken said the archives at 650 Pandora will be closed to the public from June 9 to July 4 inclusive.

It is the only time in its 14-year existence that the archives has closed.

Helmcken said that as it is possible the archives may move in the near future, it is necessary to complete the necessary tasks of assembling and filing.

When the archives reopens July 7 there will also be new hours for public access to the collection. It will be open from 9:30 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Workmen were busy today assembling controversial dish antenna

'Illegal' antenna to tap sky TV going up on legislature lawn

Science and Communications Minister Pat McGeer's slightly illegal experiment in satellite televison is under way.

The minister has no federal licence to erect a dish antenna on the back lawn of the legislature but it was being set up today nonetheless.

Starting Tuesday, television programming from satellites will be available on about 10 TV sets in the Legislative Buildings.

A ministry spokesman said the big dish and a smaller companion dish will be in operation for about a month.

Total cost of the experiment is estimated at $6,500, covering equipment rental, setting it up and taking it down again.

McGeer says the experiment is designed to demonstrate the wide variety of TV programming — educational and entertainment — that is available via satellite.

"The law is an ass," he says, when it comes to regulating what may or may not be received on a TV antenna.

If McGeer was hoping for extra publicity from federal officials trying to shut down the illegal operation, he is likely due for a disappointment.

Federal Communications Minister Francis Fox has softened last week's threat of a crackdown on satellite dish receivers.

He now intends to concentrate only on commercial users who resell the programming to community cable systems in remote areas.

Fox says private television viewers shouldn't need a government licence or permission to tune in TV broadcasts directly from a space satellite.

The federal department of communications has insisted for years that any kind of reception from satellites is criminal unless licensed by it.

But Fox said in an interview in Vancouver that when an individual uses his own antenna to bring in broadcasts for his own entertainment, "you come back to first principles — to the kind of country you're living in."

Fox said the government has no more business trying to control people bringing in U.S. "superstations" beamed via satellite from Atlanta or New York than it has trying to control people using conventional antennae to bring in TV from Buffalo.

He took pains to add that many other kinds of reception from satellites do have to be regulated. For example:

— A cable company that picks up TV signals with the intention of selling them to subscribers needs a licence to do it.

— U.S. satellite channels carrying pay-TV services made up of new movies can't legally be tuned in by anyone who doesn't pay, because of copyright laws.

— It is against the law to tune into satellite channels carrying long-distance telephone calls or other private communications.

Fox said Friday in the Commons that there may be a crackdown coming on stations that pick up satellite broadcasts and compete against cable companies. But in remote areas, he said, leniency should be the policy.

Doctors seek 40% raise

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia doctors want more money — about 40 per cent more — and they also want a 37½-hour, five-day week.

The doctors, who start fee negotiations with the provincial government this fall, discussed their position Saturday at the B.C. Medical Association's annual convention.

The association wants an across-the-board fee increase to bring doctors' incomes into line with other wage earners, said committee chairman Dr. Bud Lott.

No figures have been officially announced, but the Vancouver Sun quotes sources in the association as indicating the increase would be around 40 per cent.

Negotiators want to increase general practitioners' salaries to 80 per cent of specialists', from the current 73 per cent, he said, and they also want equalization of specialists' incomes.

And they want a 37½-hour, five-day work week.

If bargaining fails, negotiators say they will ask B.C.'s 4,600 doctors to balance bill — charge patients the difference between payments doctors receive through medicare and the amount the association is asking.

A new schedule of fees will be compiled by the association for the fall, to be used as the basis for balance billing if negotiations fail.

NDP health critic Dennis Cocke told the doctors Saturday a miserly B.C. government spends a quarter of a billion dollars a year less than it should on health programs.

Cocke (New Westminster) said the government has been diverting federal funds intended for health care into other areas since 1977 when Ottawa introduced a new cost-sharing scheme to give the provinces more flexibility in health-care spending.

He said B.C. should have a health care system consistent with its economic health.

Cocke was addressing the convention in place of Health Minister Rafe Mair who refused to attend because of statements by association president Dr. Mel Petreman.

Petreman said doctors would face an unsympathetic provincial government in their attempt to win higher incomes in this fall's fee schedule negotiations.

Forest fire brings dog breakfast?

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Have you heard the one about the dog, cat, rabbit and chicken?

No? Just ask Constable Terry Graham of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment here.

Graham was one of the officers assigned to handle the 75 calls the detachment received from anxious pet owners evacuated from this community because of an encroaching forest fire.

"I've got a dog, cat, rabbit and chicken locked up in my basement," a dismayed owner telephoned.

"I'm afraid the dog will get hungry and eat the others."

Graham went to the house and discovered the German shepherd and the hen, which was nervously clucking around the living room after laying an egg on the carpet.

There was no sign of the rabbit and the cat, he said.

'I don't know (if the pets were eaten). They just weren't there."

Pension change protest growing

A province-wide campaign against reductions in pension benefits to government workers escalated today with a union announcement some government offices and liquor stores will be closed by rotating walkouts this month.

"We have asked all our members to attend the three protest meetings and we expect this will result in some closures," a spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union said.

The rallies, as announced earlier, are Friday, June 6, in Nanaimo and Courtenay; Tuesday, June 10 in Vancouver and Monday, June 16, in Victoria.

"Some liquor stores will be closed in Victoria on June 16," the spokesman said.

"We held similar rallies on Friday in Cranbrook and Nelson and we got 450 people out to each one. Some liquor stores were closed in each city. This will be the pattern across the province."

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union has already announced it will shut down the ferry service for at least four hours in mid-day so its members can attend the rallies.

The B.C. Teachers Federation said today it will send BCTF officers to the rallies but there will be no walkout by teachers. A representative assembly of 141 teachers on the weekend voted against a one-day walkout.

Ferry service will be disrupted, from mid-morning to mid-afternoon, on the following days:

On June 6 there will be no service during those hours out of Nanaimo.

On June 10 all mid-day service out of Vancouver from Horseshoe Bay and Tsawwassen will be halted.

On June 16 ferries will stop running out of Swartz Bay until the Victoria rally is over.

NDP transportation critic Don Lockstead today blamed the provincial government for the escalating problem.

He said the government has paid to attention to protests lodged by opposition MLAs and therefore workers had to take strong measures to get action.

He predicted teachers would join the walkouts.

Lockstead told the Times:

"I can see the teachers, perhaps, having a one-day

Woodward's food store picketed

By MIKE HUGHES

Employees in the food department at Woodward's Mayfair mall store went on strike today in a fight for their first collective agreement.

Members of the Retail Clerks Union, Local 1518, set up picket lines at 7:30 a.m. at all entrances to the store but both the food store and the company's department store opened as usual at 9:30 a.m.

Personnel from the company's Lower Mainland stores have been brought in to help run the food store.

Members of the meatcutters union refused to cross the picket line today but a company spokesman said the meat department was being run with supervisory help.

The union also put up a secondary picket line at the company's Port Alberni store. The store is still open.

The main issue in the dispute is not wages but disagreement over the granting of benefits like an in-store discount, profit-sharing and pensions that are available to other Woodward's employees including the meatcutters.

Union secretary-treasurer Bryan Denton of Vancouver said Woodward's has decided to take on the union here as a test case.

"The company wants to punish the employees for joining the union and to send a message to other Woodward's employees as to what will happen if they should consider joining the union," he said.

The union is only certified to represent one other group of Woodward's employees, about 35 at the company's furniture warehouse in Vancouver.

Denton said seniority for part-time employees and union security are other issues involved.

He said the company wants a Rand formula system whereby if some employees didn't want to join the union they could just pay the dues. The union wants a union shop with all employees having to join the union after a certain period of employment.

Denton said he doesn't think the union will be able to shut down the company's food outlet here but the store will likely soon run out of a number of products because truck drivers are refusing to cross the picket line.

Bill Brown, vice-president of Woodward's personnel department, said the company will keep the store open "come strike or whatever."

He said the issue in the dispute is that the union wants the food department employees to receive all the benefits that the union has gained for employees in the major supermarkets plus the benefits that other Woodward's employees enjoy.

The company has agreed to give the food store employees the same benefits available to their counterparts in other supermarkets, he said.

Brown said floor stockers make $408 a week and cashiers, $378 a week. However, if there was no labor dispute the rate would have gone to $445 and $416 respectively on April 1, he said.

The exact number of employees involved is disputed. The union says roughly 145, the company says 160.

The union says when the employees were organized in May, 1979, more than 100 signed up. The company says the union barely got a majority.

The union admits that some of the employees in the bargaining unit reported for work today.

Negotiations for a first contract began in October, 1979.

'Lava dome' report denied

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Molten rock inside Mount St. Helens is heating spots on the summit into a red glow, but scientists say they were wrong in reporting the formation of a "lava dome" in the crater and now say they don't know what the mountain will do next.

"The red glow is there. It is caused by molten rock (magma), but it is not sitting in the crater. It's there some place in the mountain," said Tim Hait, a geologist for the U.S. Geological Survey.

Sightings of a brilliant incandescent light in the crater were first reported Thursday by aerial observers.

Further observation, however, led scientists to say Sunday the glow was not caused by the actual presence of lava in the volcano's crater but by rocks heated by gas-releasing magma just beneath the surface.

"No topographical change has emerged on the crater floor, so it appears lava has not erupted to the surface as flows or a volcanic dome," Hait said.

"My mind's filled with confusion as to what's really going on," Hait said.

The mountain spent its first quiet Sunday in three weeks. Steam emissions rose from 10,000 to 15,000 feet in the air but was mixed with little ash, aerial observers reported. Tilt meters installed on the mountainside by the USGS indicated no swelling or bulging caused by pressure from within.

Vote averts postal strike

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be no postal strike.

Postal workers ratified by 89.8 per cent the terms of an agreement worked out with the federal government, the first in 15 years settled without at least a wildcat strike.

It contains a 66-cent-an-hour raise and cost-of-living allowance of 79 cents an hour or eight per cent for postal clerks and 9.3-percent for mail handlers.

Patronage charge in energy post

The woman appointed by Energy Minister Bob McClelland to the $60,000-a-year job of chairing the B.C. Energy Commission is the daughter of former Social Credit MLA Bert Price.

"It's incredible," said NDP Leader Dave Barrett when he learned that Marie Taylor is Price's daughter.

"With full respect to Mrs. Taylor as a person, I am amazed that Mr. McClelland would make such an appointment.

"When McClelland was in opposition he would have screamed from the top of Grouse Mountain if he heard we were considering appointing the son or daughter of a former MLA to such a post."

Barrett said Mrs. Taylor, a department store training and management development manager, has no background in the energy field but "obviously she has a political connection."

McClelland called Barrett's allegation of political patronage "a stupid response."

"Obviously, you wouldn't expect us to appoint Barrett's campaign manager. God, anybody with any sense in his head would know we're not going to appoint anyone who's in basic disagreement with the government."

Taylor, contacted at her home in Burnaby, said she would be surprised if her appointment created controversy.

Taylor said she finds it unusual that anyone would question this appointment when no one came forward to mention her father when she was handed other high profile duties such as chairing the Vancouver General Hospital Board during its recent unrest and her appointment six weeks ago to the B.C. Public Services Commission, the body responsible for, among other things, hiring and promoting civil servants.

Taylor, David Newlands and Bob Smith were appointed to the energy commission Friday to replace chairman Norm Gish, deputy chairman John Ludgate and James David King. Gish resigned to return to private industry while King left to devote more time to his work for the B.C. harbors board.

Ludgate, however, denied he was leaving to return to the private sector as indicated in a press release Friday from McClelland's office.

"I'm 50 years old and unemployed," he said Saturday.

Raindrops kept falling on their mortice boards Saturday but faces were bright as more than 1,000 degrees were conferred at 17th annual UVic convocation

The rain and grey skies were merely academic

Unsettled weather and a pall of grey sky was merely academic for thousands who attended and took part in University of Victoria graduation ceremonies Saturday.

Improvised plastic capes shielded many from showers as more than 1,000 gowned students filed to McKinnon centre for the conferring of graduate and undergraduate degrees.

Two ceremonies — at 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. — were arranged to accommodate the parents, relatives or close friends of those receiving degrees, filling the gymnasium to standing room only.

Both events were followed by a reception in the old gym, and Saturday night Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving was host to a dinner for members of the senate, special guests and other dignitaries.

The 17th convocation honored two outstanding British Columbians. Honorary degrees were conferred on Victoria wildlife painter Fenwick Lansdowne, 42, and Mr. Justice Tom Berger, of the B.C. Supreme Court, who was born in Victoria.

They pay their way to march

We watched the Victoria Day Parade and wondered how so many visiting bands are housed and fed during their stay? C.E.W.

This year 37 bands visited with a total of 2,800 musicians and assistants.

Mabelle Murphy, co-ordinator of the Greater Victoria Festival Society which organizes the event, says most bands stay in motels and make their own arrangements, working throughout the year to pay for the trip.

A few stay in one of six school auditoriums and are charged a nominal fee. For security reasons, only six auditoriums are used — they're the only ones that aren't connected to the school itself.

Others stay in residences at the University of Victoria at reasonable rates.

Murphy said it's becoming expensive for bands to attend the parade because housing, food and transportation costs are increasing.

Nevertheless, bands from the U.S. like to come to the Victoria parade.

It's lucky, too, because Victoria only has three marching bands, she said, and many Canadian bands want to have their expenses paid to attend the parade.

Tillicum lawsuit up in air

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier hasn't made up his mind whether to sue Capital Region District chairman James Campbell.

Couvelier said today he is still considering the suit he threatened Friday after the chairman released a statement on the mayor's role in the Tillicum shopping centre controversy.

"I don't have to do it right away," he added.

He said he doesn't want the private row to interfere with a proposal Saanich is making to the CRD.

Couvelier said Campbell will call a special regional board meeting this week to discuss the offer.

Saanich is proposing the CRD hold a public meeting to listen to Tillicum developers Cal Investments Ltd. explain its $30 million shopping centre proposal.

Any decision would be non-binding on Saanich and Cal.

City group seeks ad-free TV

By NORM GIDNEY

A Victoria group announced today it plans to apply for a licence to broadcast commercial-free television on Channel 10.

The CFRE Public Broadcasting Society, formed last week, wants the last VHF television frequency available in the northwest for Canada's first non-profit, non-commercial video outlet, president Kim Martin told the Times today.

Programming would be similar to that offered on KCTS, Channel 9, the U.S. Public Broadcasting System outlet in Seattle.

"There's one VHF station left — it's up for grabs," he said. CFRE — the proposed call letters for the station — plans to apply this fall to the Canadian Radio, Television and Telecommunications Commission for the frequency.

It is also CFRE's hope to obtain the new quarters at Blanshard and Kings intended as CBC broadcast studios but which have been empty for two years.

There have been several tentative proposals already by commercial broadcasters for Channel 10, which had been reserved for the CBC until it cancelled plans for a Victoria station because of budget restrictions.

Western Approaches, which has UHF Channel 21 in Vancouver, has expressed interest in acquiring both the frequency and the building for use a production centre.

Martin hopes the CRTC will go for CFRE's (pronounced Sea-Free) plans.

The society grew out of a public meeting called by the Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C., a Vancouver-based organization headed by playwright Herschel Hardin, who is also the main organizer behind the Capital Cable Co-op.

Martin heads the new organization, which has about 150 supporters who have paid $5 memberships. Martin has a bachelor of science degree in psychology and drives a truck for a living.

"This is my fulltime mental activity," he said.

Other members of CFRE have experience in broadcasting and other fields. Former mayor Peter Pollen has als been involved, Martin said.

The CBC no longer represents the ideal it started with decades ago, Martin said.

"Public broadcasting started in Canada as a concept a long time ago but the CBC has degenerated," he said.

"There are a lot of people who want to see commercial-free broadcasting. It's the interruptions, it's the constant hard sell that are offensive."

The society plans a television station which will be regionally and provincially oriented rather than one primarily focussed on Victoria.

Martin and empty CBC building

He emphasized that CFRE programming would be different from the kind of local public affairs broadcasting which now appears on Channel 10.

Initially, much of CFRE's programming would be borrowed from TV Ontario.

KCTS has also promised support, Martin said.

RJH heart care tour June 15

Victorians will get an inside look on June 15 at Royal Jubilee Hospital facilities for treating heart patients.

A tour, starting at 12:30 p.m., will be sponsored by the First Open Heart Society of B.C. with the co-operation of doctors and RJH staff.

The public also can attend a seminar and dinner. Tickets for this part of the program, which will include entertainment by Bastion Theatre Players, are $12.50 each. Information is available at 592-0320 or 384-1931.

Car hits ditch, driver fair

The driver of a car which struck a ditch at high speed on Patricia Bay Highway Saturday night is in fair condition with head and back injuries.

Saanich police said James Hoggan, 40, of 2425 Amelia was southbound in the 6100-block when his car left the road and was demolished.

Another driver was arrested and was to be charged with dangerous driving on Patricia Bay Highway after a high-speed chase which began at Quadra and ended at an RCMP roadblock in North Saanich shortly before 3 a.m. Sunday.

Duncan RCMP reported a crash on the Trans-Canada Highway at Sprott Road north of the city.

A car driven south at 8:50 a.m. Sunday by Jean R. Seright, 49, of Victoria left the road, struck a meridian and flew 265 feet before striking a fence and tree, causing it to catch fire.

Seright and her 11-year-old son were taken to Cowichan District Hospital with undetermined injuries and the boy was trasferred later to Victoria.

A similar accident early Saturday afternoon occurred on Sooke Road east of Cooper's Cove on rain-dampened pavement which another driver said may have been slicked with volcanic ash.

The driver got out, reached in to turn off the racing engine, then collapsed. The witness said he was bleeding from a head injury.

Police said they were not informed of the accident.

Ottawa housing neglect rapped

By AL FORREST

British Columbia must speak with a louder voice in Ottawa — but not threaten to leave Canada, B.C. Real Estate Association President George Yen said today.

The west coast is suffering from neglect.

"They don't know we're out here."

A vivid example of this, he said, is Ottawa's failure to do anything about the housing crisis in the west.

"All they see is that the vacancy rate in Quebec and Ontario is between five and eight per cent.

"In British Columbia the vacancy rate is almost nil."

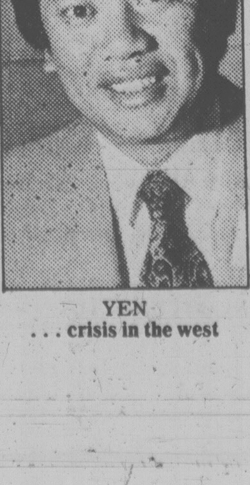
And the problem will get worse because people are moving to British Columbia where the economy is strong.

Yen, a former president of the Greater Vancouver Real Estate Association, said federal neglect is creating a feeling of anger across British Columbia but it falls short of wanting to leave Canada.

Yen made the comments in an interview at the beginning of the BCREA convention at the Empress.

He said concerns about rental accommodation and interest rates will dominate the meetings.

A delegation of real estate officials likely will go to Ottawa to ask Prime Minister Trudeau to reinstate capital cost allowances to spur apartment construction in the west, Yen said.



YEN
. . . crisis in the west

When vacancy rates were low in Ontario and Quebec the federal government established a national policy allowing investors to write off 10 per cent of the value of frame apartment buildings per year against rental income for income tax purposes.

Concrete buildings were entitled to a five per cent writeoff.

This proved especially valuable to B.C. because it encourage construction with wood — which increased sales of B.C. lumber.

The restoration of a 10 per cent writeoff is needed now, Yen said.

The vacancy rate should be in the range of three to four per cent at all times, he said.

Yen said the real estate industry is pleased to see mortgage interest rates easing.

"I would think there will be a further move downwards but it is difficult to know how close we are to the bottom."

Yen said the BCREA approves of recent actions by the provincial government in the real estate field, especially the program of making special mortgage rates available for low-income families.

Stargazers in line for a treat

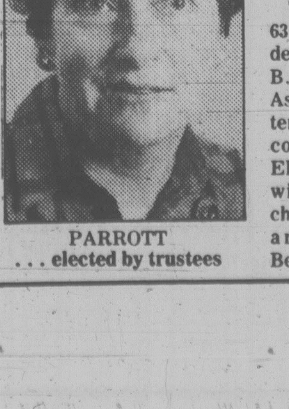
If the weather improves after sunset skywatchers should be able to see an unusual event in the western sky.

Mars, Jupiter and Saturn are in fairly close proximity, but are moving further apart and will be aligned with Venus in a few months, said astrophysical observatory director Dr. Sidney van den Bergh.

"It is quite an impressive sight to see these planets so close in the sky," he said.

But in his view they looked even better last month when Regulus was "kind of in between Mars and Jupiter," giving a tri-colored effect.

Parrott heads national body



PARROTT
. . . elected by trustees

Saanich school trustee Rubymay Parrott today was elected president of the Canadian School Trustees Association at its annual meeting in Montreal.

The former District 63 chairman was president last year of the B.C. School Trustees Association, and is attending the Montreal convention at Queen Elizabeth Hotel along with current district chairman Lois Walsh and trustee John Betts.

WINDING UP A YARN can be tough for some long-winded story tellers, but at Firestone's synthetic fibres plant in Hopewell, Va. it's no trouble at all. Seen here, an inspector checks over lengths of polyester yarn being wound onto cylinders. The company estimates that more than 102-million kilograms of the yarn, used in making tire cord fabric, will be used by the North American tire industry this year.
